New Federal Union May Ditch UPWA, Murray Says

CIO Chief Warns Flaxer He's Ready To Start Separate Organization Unit

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 23 (AP). A fight over union-raiding broke out on the CIO convention floor today, with President Philip Murray cracking the whip for the second day in a row.

Once again Murray hit at unions that have not shown growth, and he issued what was in effect a sharp warning to the president of the United Public Workers of America (UPWA), Abram Flaxer.

He told Flaxer, whose union has had jurisdiction over Federal employes' CIO unions, that he was ready to create a separate international union to take over organization of the United States workers.

Flaxer had accused other CIO unions of raiding his union for members, and went on to assert that he had not always followed CIO policy because "I don't agree with some CIO policies, and my union doesn't agree."

Flaxer Heckled

He was subjected to frequent heckling from the floor, and the chair attempted several times to limit him to a resolution urging intensified organizing drives, the subject which had been under discussion.

Tonight Murray won convention indorsement of a foreign policy resolution approving the Marshall Plan for aid to Europe, after goading some 40 left-wing leaders into standing up and being counted. A similar taunt yesterday had gone unheeded.

Joseph Selly, president of the Communications Workers, and Abe Feinglass, Chicago, delegates of the Fur and Leather Workers, argued against the resolution.

Murray called the floor fight "part of the cold war . . . carried out by the same people in every democratic country in the world."

Murray remarked yesterday that "not everyone opposed to the Marshall Plan is a Communist. But all Communists are opposed to the Marshall Plan."

"Ideological Bombs"

"They might as well give up the idea of use of ideological bombs," he told his enthusiastic audience today. "They have rendered themselves valueless and ineffective."

Earlier the resolution on organizing had been seized upon by left-wingers, who used it to denounce Murray's criticism of the left yesterday, and to decry what James Matles of the Electrical Workers Union said were raids by some CIO unions on his and other

Sparkman Faces Apartment Loss; D. C. Law Lacking

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) said yesterday he is about to lose his apartment here because the District rent control law doesn't contain a clause similar to one he helped write into the national law.

The Broadmoor Apartments, 3601 Connecticut ave. nw., in which he lived for 11 years, are being turned into a cooperative. Thirty-three tenants there have filed suit to keep their quarters.

Sparkman recalled that he took part in a successful fight to include in the national rent law a provision forbidding such a change unless 65 per cent of the tenants voluntarily sign in favor of it.

That clause was left out of the special law for the Capital area, so Senator Sparkman said he is house-hunting because he doesn't want to buy into the cooperative.

Crusade in Europe

Soldiers Shout With Laughter When Ike Falls Flat in Mud

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

XVIII

By the end of August the approximate strength of the Allied forces on the Continent was 20 American divisions, 12 British divisions, 3 Canadian divisions, 1 French and 1 Polish division. There were no more British divisions available, but in the United Kingdom were an additional 6 American divisions, including 3 airborne.

The operational strength of all available air forces was approximately 4035 heavy bombers, 1720 light, medium and torpedo bombers and 5000 fighters. Added to all this was the Troop Transport Command, which, counting both American and British formations, numbered more than 2000 transport planes.

Against a defeated and demoralized enemy almost any reasonable risk is justified and the success attained by the victor will ordinarily be measured in the boldness, almost foolhardiness, of his movements. The whole purpose of the costly breakthrough and the whirlwind attacks of the succeeding three weeks was to produce just such a situation as now confronted us; we had been preparing our plans so as to reap the richest harvest from the initial success. But the difficulties of supply, once our columns began their forward race, was a problem that required effective solution if we were to gain our full battle profit.

Port Facilities Severely Limited

Our logistic formations had been confined to a very restricted area during the entire Battle of the Beachhead. The only operating ports were Cherbourg and the artificial port on the British beaches near Arromanches.

The repair of Cherbourg had presented many difficulties. The harbor and approaches had to be cleared of hundreds of mines, many of them of new and particularly efficient types. We began using the port in July, but it did not reach volume production until the middle of August. The artificial port on the American beaches had been demolished in the June storm.

These meager facilities could not support us indefinitely and there was bound to be a line somewhere in the direction of Germany where we would be halted, if not by the action of the enemy, then because our supply lines had been strained to their elastic limit.

A reinforced division, in active operations, consumes from 600 to 700 tons of supplies per day. When battling in a fixed position most of this tonnage is represented in ammunition; on the march the bulk is devoted to gasoline and lubricants, called, in the language of the supply officer, POL.

20,000 Tons Moved To Front Each Day

With 36 divisions in action, we were faced with the problem of delivering from beaches and ports to the front lines some 20,000 tons of supplies every day. Our spearheads, moreover, were moving swiftly, frequently 75 miles per day. The supply service had to catch these with loaded trucks.

All units were certainly going to be short of supply. The task was to allot deficits so as to avoid stopping troops before they had accomplished their main objectives, and this in turn meant that no formation could get one pound of supply over and above that needed for basic missions.

When action is proceeding as rapidly as it did across France during the hectic days of late August and early September every commander from division upward becomes obsessed with the idea that with only a few more tons of supply he could rush right on and win the war. This is the spirit that wins wars and is always to be encouraged. Initiative, confidence and boldness are among the most admirable traits of the good combat leader.

German Invasion In Late '44 Fantastic

In the late summer days of 1944 it was known to us that the German still had disposable reserves within his own country. Any idea of attempting to thrust forward a small force, bridge the Rhine, and continue on into the heart of Germany was completely fantastic. Even had such a force been able to start with a total of 10 or a dozen divisions—and it is certain no more could have been supported even temporarily—the attacking column would have gradually grown smaller as it dropped off units to protect its flanks and would have ended up facing inescapable defeat. Such an attempt

D. C. to Get Emergency Police Corps

Approval Is Given By Commissioners; Reserves May Act At Inauguration

By Edward F. Ryan and Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporters

Formation of an emergency reserve police corps in Washington was approved yesterday by the District Commissioners as part of a three-point program for expanding the Metropolitan Police Department.

The reserve police force will be organized and trained by the Metropolitan Police Department. Its members will be volunteer civilians. They will receive a 30-hour basic training course. Some are expected to be available for duty during the inauguration.

They will have full police powers during specified periods set out by orders of the Commissioners when they declare the services of the reserve police are needed. Whether the reserves will carry guns is still to be decided by the Police Department. The decision will be made after the men receive training. Their training will include full instruction and practice in use of police weapons. They will be equipped with billies.

A second order of the Commissioners approved immediate hiring of 80 policewomen. They will be hired as soon as possible to relieve men from clerical duties in precinct stations and in Police Headquarters.

Minimum Height Cut

A third order took an inch off the minimum height requirements for new policemen, and added two years to the maximum entrance age for regular policemen. The new minimum height will be 5 feet 7 inches. The new maximum age will be 33. The changes are effective through December 1, 1949.

All three orders were adopted substantially as recommended by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett. They were aimed largely at taking his department out of a manpower pinch that has left 216 jobs vacant in the regular force.

To cut into these vacancies, the Civil Service Commission yesterday sent the Police Department applications of 39 persons. These were immediately referred to the police clinic.

Barrett personally took his appeal for establishment of the reserve police force to the Commissioners in their meeting yesterday.

Recruiting Begins Today

All three Commissioners declined to disclose any reason for their speed in issuing the orders. Commissioner John Russell Young said "We want to prepare for any emergency."

The reserve force was designed to fit into the national program mapped by the Office of Civilian Defense Planning of the National Defense Establishment. Police officials indicated the main immediate drive was to have the extra police reserves available for use in the inauguration in January.

Upon receipt of the Commissioners' order approving the reserve corps, police officials moved at once to get it set up.

Inspector Walter Storm said that recruiting will begin today. He will receive applications at his office in the Municipal Center. The telephone is National 4000.

Present plans call for a very limited, carefully selected force. A force of about 200 men will be sought at the outset.

When fully trained, the reserve policemen will be eligible for appointment by the District Commissioners to serve as special policemen "during any emergency of riot, pestilence, invasion, insurrec-

Railroad and Express Workers Threatening Further N. Y. Tie-up

No Solution Near In Dock Strike; 2000 Truck Drivers Remain Off Jobs

New York, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—New York City's transportation tie-up grew more tangled today as Railway Express workers staged a slowdown, Hudson Tube trainmen threatened to strike and 2000 truck drivers and 45,000 longshoremen remained off the job.

The Railway Express Agency placed an embargo on most rail and air traffic in and out of the city.

A company spokesman said the men began their slowdown to protest the firing of 13 terminal employes and threatened to continue it until the men were rehired.

[Daniel Sullivan, metropolitan area general chairman of the brotherhood, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying the firm had discharged the men because of "falsifications" in their applications as to incidents which occurred before they were hired by the agency. The AP quoted A. M. Hartung, a company vice president, as saying some of the employes had given "materially false information in their applications for employment, generally by concealment of criminal records."—Editor's Note.]

Rail Strike Set Saturday

Meanwhile Local 1060 of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen planned a walkout for 12:01 a. m. Saturday if the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad goes through with a rescheduling plan which would eliminate the jobs of 11 ticket agents. The railroad carries 200,000 passengers daily via the Hudson tubes between Manhattan and northern New Jersey.

The costly 14-day-old strike of East Coast dock workers seemed no nearer solution today than when the walkout began. The ship owners, whose plan to end the strike was flatly rejected by the union last night, met throughout the day.

[The Associated Press quoted John V. Lyon, chairman of the New York Shipping Association, as saying 70 member firms voted unanimously Tuesday that their negotiators should make no further proposals to the union."

[He said, however, the negotiators will hold themselves "subject to call by the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service" and will attend Wednesday's meeting.—Editor's Note.]

A joint meeting between the shipowners and the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL) 125-man strike negotiating committee was postponed until 11 a. m. Wednesday.

Mediator Still Hopeful

Federal Mediator William Margolis said hopefully, "As long as meetings go on, the situation is not hopeless."

The ILA is seeking a 25-cent hourly wage boost, a welfare plan and improvements in vacation schedules and hiring methods.

Joseph P. Ryan, lifetime ILA president, said Halifax dock workers had notified him that they will refuse to work cargo on ships diverted there pending an emergency meeting Wednesday.

Word from Halifax was, however, that the men were continuing to unload ships diverted there. Waterfront officials said they still were unloading the Holland-American Line ship Westerdam and the Cunard Line's Media. The Media had only enough cargo in her holds to provide four or five hours' work, a union official said.

Dock Strike Costly

The executive committee of the New York Chamber of Commerce set the cost of the ship strike at more than 30 million dollars daily. The committee said that more than 30 million dollars worth of commercial shipping and two million dollars worth of Marshall Plan cargo was being immobilized each day. It added that nearly 200,000 sacks of mail destined for foreign countries were piled up in East Coast postoffices.

The truck strike, second in two months, affected almost one-third of the city's trucking industry.

'Purged' by President in 1946

Roger Slaughter, Truman Foe, Indicted Under Lobbying Laws

Former Representative Roger C. Slaughter, Missouri Democrat who was "purged" by President Truman in 1946, yesterday was indicted on two counts of violating lobbying laws.

The indictment, returned in District Court before Judge Richmond B. Keech by the regular District grand jury, charges that Slaughter lobbied here for the Kansas City and Chicago Boards of Trade and other grain interests but did not register as a lobbyist as provided by law.

It is charged in the indictment that the 43-year-old Kansas City attorney was paid more than $54,000 for his services and expenses.

According to the indictment, Slaughter should have reported officially that he was employed from October, 1947, until September of this year as a Washington representative of the two boards of trade and the Minneapolis Grain Exchange.

The indictment alleges that Slaughter attempted to influence "passage of legislation" and "defeat of legislation by Congress and accepted from the three groups a salary of $25,000 and expenses of $18,599.13.

A second count in the indictment charges that the former Congressman was employed as a lobbyist from March to September by the North American Export Grain Association, Inc., of New York City.

It is said in the indictment that he received $7500 salary and $3087.44 expenses from this association.

The grand jury charged that

Thanksgiving Meal Up 7%; Living Cost Drops Half of 1%

First Decline in 7 Months Carries Index For October to 173.6

By The Associated Press

The first decline in living costs in seven months was announced yesterday by the Government.

The announcement, made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, came only a few hours after President Truman named Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of his Economic Advisory Council, to work out an anti-inflation program for presentation to Congress early next year.

The cost of living decline was slight — only one-half of 1 per cent—but it broke a steady climb through most of the late spring and summer.

The decrease showed up in the index for consumer prices. The index dropped to 173.6 for October from the all-time highs of 174.5 for the months of August and September.

(Data released by the Federal Reserve Board Monday night led to some interpretations that the index had declined in September also, but yesterday Labor Department officials emphasized that this was not so—that the October decline was the first in seven months.)

In a separate listing, BLS surveys showed that between September 15 and October 15, Washington, D. C., retail food prices dropped 1.7 per cent, for the fourth consecutive month of price drops here.

But—while Washington food prices on October 15 were 3 per cent below the June peak, they were still 4 per cent higher than a year ago, 44 per cent more than in June, 1946, and 122 per cent more than August, 1939.

In the one-month period, eggs advanced seasonally 5.3 per cent, and beverages were unchanged.

The BLS "meats, poultry and fish" group dropped an average of 3 per cent here, even though the price of fish alone increased 5 per cent.

Dairy prices here took a seasonal drop of 3 per cent, with an unseasonal drop of 9 per cent for butter

Price of Dinner for 4 Put at $5.47 Against $5.12 for Last Year

(Turkey Dinner Cost Chart, P. 9)

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Your Thanksgiving Day dinner will cost you about 7 per cent more this year than last year's meal.

If you have an average Washington family, with four persons at the table, and pay average prices for your Gobbler Day spread, what the four actually eat at that meal will cost $5.47.

And if your appetite is similarly average, the Bureau of Labor Statistics, which compiled these prices, said yesterday, you will eat only half the turkey or less at the first sitting.

Last year it cost the average Washington family of four $5.12; the year before, $4.88; $3.82 in 1945, and $2.60 in 1941.

These computations do not include the price of the turkey and other food you save for post-Thanksgiving Day menus.

The BLS figures show, as most housewives know, that primary cause of the meal-price increase is the piece de resistance.

An average 12-pound turkey, New York dressed (killed and plucked but not drawn), costs $8.88 this year, or an average of 74 cents a pound, owing to the smallest turkey crop in 10 years. Last year's local average was 63 cents a pound.

'Missing' Rocket Rose 114 Miles To Set Record

A captured German V-2 rocket, fired from New Mexico nearly two years ago in an experiment, apparently set a new altitude record of 114 miles.

The applied physics laboratory of Johns Hopkins University, Silver Spring, Md., said yesterday the rocket's warhead has been found by an Army recovery team 20 miles from the White Sands Proving Grounds, where the 14-ton projectile was set off on December 17, 1946.

The rest of the rocket came down, but the warhead was missing so long that there was some half serious, half facetious speculation that it might have broken through the earth's gravitational field and escaped into space. Scientists said this couldn't have happened.

The Navy said instruments packed in the warhead showed it had reached the highest altitude ever attained by a rocket fired in the United States.

Oft-Derided Slope Line System Will Light Nation's Airports

Post Reporter

Two CAA engineers took quiet satisfaction yesterday from the fact that their once derided plan for guiding airplanes safely down through fog and rain will be installed at airports throughout the Nation.

Their "slope line" approach light system—made from ordinary auto headlights and steel landing mats left over from the war—is both cheap and simple. Yet it has been selected for standardization over a host of other methods tested during the past few years.

The latter include such schemes as supersonic sound waves to coagulate fog, infrared photography and a combination of television and radar. Many of the country's leading scientists and private engineering laboratories worked on the problem.

CAA Administrator D. W. Rentzel said that funds now are available to install the system at about a dozen of the Nation's most congested airports. Later, it will go in all over the country.

A spokesman for CAA said that undoubtedly the National Airport here will be one of the first to get the long row of approach lights. Their installation will markedly change the appearance of the city from the air at night.

But if H. J. Cory Pearson, formerly of Falls Church, Va., and M. S. Gilbert, both of the CAA experimental station at Indianapolis, are feeling justifiably proud today, their elation is mixed with sadness.

The man who first conceived the "slope line" approach light system, CAA Engineer Arthur W. Sweet, did not live to see his idea vindicated. Sweet, who lived here at 1314 Saratoga ave. ne., worked with Pearson in the development of the lights. Gilbert got into the project after Sweet's death in 1945.

"I know this would be a tremendous satisfaction to Sweet if he were alive today," said Pearson. "We were subject to a great deal of derision which did not help our professional reputations. The kidding stopped only recently."

One former associate of Sweet's at CAA said the engineer died of a broken heart.

Death for Tojo, 6 Aides Upheld By MacArthur

Japs Asked to Pray On Execution Day; 25 Sentences Confirmed

Tokyo (Wednesday) Nov. 24 (AP). Gen. Douglas MacArthur today upheld the sentences of all 25 former Japanese leaders convicted as war criminals.

MacArthur's decision in his review upheld death sentences for former Premier Hideki Tojo and six others, life imprisonment for 16 and lesser prison terms for two others.

The occupation commander, sole reviewing authority under the Allied trial court's charter, said in a statement:

"I can find nothing of technical commission or omission in the incidents of the trial itself of sufficient import to warrant my intervention in the judgements which have been rendered.

"I therefore direct the commanding general of the Eighth Army to execute the sentences as pronounced by the tribunal."

MacArthur did not announce the date on which Tojo and his six codefendants will be led up the gallows to die for plunging the Pacific into war.

MacArthur asked the people of Japan to pray on the day of execution. He asked "members of all congregations throughout Japan of whatever creed or faith, in the privacy of their homes or at their office of public worship to seek divine help and guidance that the world keep the peace lest the human race perish."

At least five of the men were reported planning to appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court. Tojo is not among them. He was represented as asking only to get the hanging over with quickly.

House Probers Denounced by Bishop Oxnam

Methodist Leader Assails Listing of Social Action Group

Newark, N. J., Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist Church tonight scathingly denounced the House Committee on Un-American Activities which "has now presumed to speak in the field of religion."

In a speech before 700 members of the Newark conference of the Methodist Church, Bishop Oxnam attacked a pamphlet issued yesterday by the committee which pinned a Communist label on the Methodist Federation of Social Action.

"The Thomas committee knows perfectly well that any attempt to identify the Protestant churches with communism is destined to failure because it is based upon absolute falsehood," Bishop Oxnam said.

"Protestants believe that the conspirators who would destroy our freedom can be ferreted out and properly punished better by the painstaking and patriotic procedures of the Federal Bureau of Investigation than by the hearsay and Un-American procedures of this committee."

The committee's pamphlet, entitled "100 Things You Should Know About Communism and Religion," said that the Methodist Federation of Social Action, while not an official church unit, "is trying to use the prestige of the Methodist Church to promote the line of the Communist Party."

The pamphlet also labeled a second religious organization, two clergymen and the church magazine, The Protestant, as followers of the Communist line.

"The Committee on Un-American Activities, whose chairman Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R.,

Council Votes $20,000 Grant To Save Alexandria Hospital

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

The Alexandria City Council last night agreed to give the Alexandria Hospital $20,000 as stop-gap aid to keep its doors open.

The council also voted that a complete financial audit of the hospital's operations be made and that a special citizens' committee be appointed to study the results and recommend a long-range solution to the hospital's problems.

The council acted in response to the hospital's recent plea for $110,000 next year and its statement that the hospital could not stay open after January 31 without more funds.

The council approved the following five recommendations offered by its hospital committee:

1. That the hospital's request for $50,000 for the hospitalization of indigents next year be recommended to the city manager for inclusion in the city welfare department's 1949 budget. (The welfare department, it was understood, has already included this item in the 1949 budget it has submitted to the city manager).

2. That the council defer action on the hospital's previous request for a $60,000 grant.

3. That a financial audit be made.

4. That a citizens' committee study results of the audit and make recommendations.

5. That the council give the hospital $20,000 immediately to meet the "existing emergency."

The council approved the $20,000 appropriation on its first read-

Able to Play Poker, Jesse Jones Also Can Testify, Judge Rules

New York, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—A Federal judge ruled today that if Jesse Jones, Texas oil millionaire and former head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, is well enough to play poker until 2 a. m., he is well enough to appear as a lawsuit witness.

The court appearance of Jones was sought by James A. Moffatt in an eight-million-dollar suit against the Arabian-American Oil Co., Inc.

On November 15, an affidavit was submitted to Federal Judge Samuel H. Kaufman by Dr. Robert Levi, who said Jones, 74, was suffering from a severe heart condition and appearance as a witness would be detrimental to his health.

Moffatt's attorney today submitted an affidavit which said, in part:

"The witness Jones played poker at the 29 Club at 11 East 61st until 2 a. m. November 17 and, during the evening, Jones consumed large quantities of whisky."

The affadavit said the stakes in the game ran as high as $4000 a hand. William Maloney, Moffatt's attorney, argued that a man who could stand such excitement could stand an examination. Judge Kaufman agreed.

Joseph M. Harkfield, attorney for Jones who is now living in New York, agreed to the appearance of the former New Deal official at a private hearing Friday.

Moffatt, who also served as a top Government official in the post of Federal Housing administrator, is asking compensation for services he allegedly performed which resulted in the Arabian-American Co. acquiring a valuable oil property from King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia.

PEOPLE In The NEWS

By Sam Stavisky

Britain's Shy, Retiring King Seems to Rate Headlines Only When He's Hit by Ailment

It's probably one of those lucky things—as likely to occur in cabbages as in kings—that George VI of Great Britain and the Commonwealth of Nations, is naturally shy and retiring. Else he'd surely be suffering by now from a horrid inferiority complex.

KING GEORGE VI

For most of his life, George was but the younger brother of the Prince of Wales. And when George unexpectedly assumed the throne 12 years ago following Edward's abdication, even the kingship lacked luster under the white-brilliant klieg-lights played on the monarch who'd given up the crown for "the woman I love."

As King, George took a back seat while the headlines danced about the head of Princess Elizabeth, her romance and most recently, her baby boy, who like herself is slated someday to rule Brittannia. Nowadays, King George appears to rate a headline or two to himself only when he breaks out with a serious ailment.

George VI is as dependable as the Rock of Gibraltar, and just as unglamorous. Edward, the princess and the baby all have glamour. The King has a deep feeling of humanity, a common humane touch, but no glamour. That's the way it is.

Is Closest King to People

Yet, the 52-year-old British sovereign is without doubt one of the most popular kings in the empire's history, closer to the people than any of his predecessors.

"This one will never set the Thames on fire," they said when the quiet, steady Duke of York succeeded the gay, mercurial Edward to Buckingham Palace. Nor has he. But during the five years of blitz and the six years of war, George and his smiling Queen provided an undimming source of inspiration to the bomb-benumbed people of England.

It was during the war that the frail, unglamorous George proved that every inch of his 5 feet 8 were regal in terms of courage and determination. Churchill's immortal cries of defiance gave the British hope; George's quiet words as he visited the rubble of the home-front and the lines of the battle-front gave his people heart.

Prince Albert Frederick Arthur George—known to intimates as "Bertie"—was born to play second fiddle to Edward, 18 months his senior and next in line to the throne. Besides he was bashful and plagued with ulcers and a speech defect. He was glad to be out of the limelight.

Marriage Was Love-Match

His growth and development were in the royal tradition—routine. A little schooling, a little culture, duty with the Navy, and service at sea with distinction in World War I. The one glamorous episode of his life was his marriage in 1923 to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, a gentle-born Scotch commoner, an oldfashioned love match.

Then there came the birth of Princess Elizabeth—and later Margaret Rose. "Lilybet" caught the public's fancy, and her dad, then Duke of York, was heard to remark: "My only claim to fame is being father of Elizabeth." For all of his shyness, George VI always possessed a dry humor.

On December 10, 1936 Edward abdicated and George VI was crowned, just four days short of his 41st birthday. True, the King no longer rules in democratic England, but his ceremonial and symbolic burdens are heavy. The long war made them acutely so.

There's lots of pomp and circumstances to being a British King, but insofar as he is able to do so, George VI lives simply and quietly. He takes a great interest in the economic and social welfare of his subjects. Even as he did during the war, he gets around, talks to the little folk in the streets, shops, factories, farms. "A decent bloke, you know," commented a Cockney.

Blood Clot Denied As King's Ailment

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—Britain worried over the news disclosed in the predawn announcement today that King George VI has a serious ailment of the arteries in his legs.

The official announcement said the King was suffering from a blood obstruction in the legs, first discovered when he became alarmed over numbness in his right foot two weeks ago.

It added there might be a "serious risk to a limb" if he undertook the rigors of the long-planned royal tour of Australia and New Zealand. Accordingly the trip has been canceled along with all public appearances for the next several months.

Authorities Deny Clot

Palace spokesmen declined to amplify this original medical bulletin until the London press unanimously expressed the belief the King had a blood clot in his leg. Palace authorities then told accredited reporters at the royal court there was no clot.

The official announcement said "the King is suffering from an obstruction of the circulation through the arteries of the legs which has only recently become acute."

This was a clue that led some medical authorities to believe the King's ailment might be hardening of the arteries—fairly common in men of his age. He will be 53 on December 14.

That disease can have several serious complications. Sometimes a clot forms. Such a clot, if not removed by an operation or dissolved by drugs, may move to the heart, causing death.

Result of Restriction

Severe and prolonged restriction of blood circulation can cause gangrene. A common treatment of gangrene is amputation of the affected part unless blood circulation can be quickly and effectively restored.

The doctors prescribed complete rest and already have begun special treatments to improve the blood circulation. Treatments must be carried on for several months.

The first announcement of the illness was issued at the unusual hour of 1:30 a. m. Obviously only a very serious risk to the King's health could have forced a course bound to bring heavy disappointment to the two dominions, Australia and New Zealand, which have spent large sums of money preparing for their royal visitors.

The King will continue to discharge the duties that can be handled at his desk in the palace.

Artery Hardening Seen Cause of King's Illness

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Medical authorities here today said the reports of King George's illness "add up" to something due to hardening of the arteries.

This source of trouble is indicated, they said, by three facts:

1. The "acute onset," that is, the obstruction to circulation to the King's right foot has been fairly rapid.

2. The trouble is reported to be limited to one leg.

3. He is at the time of life when there is nearly always some hardening in arteries.

Against this view, they added, is the fact that an official palace announcement says the trouble is not due to a blood clot. One of the common sources of trouble when hardening of arteries is one of the causes of poor leg circulation is a femoral thrombosis, meaning a clot in the main artery that supplies blood to the leg.

Unescorted

Boy Evacuee Flies Here From China

MILLARD ARNOLD, Jr.
Fast trip from China

'Ceptin' maybe for the hostess—"she was pretty and nice"—and the comic books—"wasn't enough of 'em"—Millard D. Arnold, jr., age 7, was a bit blase about his unescorted plane trip as a Shanghai evacuee.

"I've flown before," the freckle-faced young man explained with a shrug, when asked about his globe-trotting by anxious relatives at National Airport yesterday.

It was "a hat with a propeller-onit" like the one he saw in the comics that Millard wanted to talk about—and buy. When his uncle, Maurice T. Rothstein, with whom Millard will stay in Birdsville, Md., bought one for hi mat the airport, then and only then did the young evacuee get excited.

Although Millard thought there wasn't "anything to be afraid of" in Shanghai, his father, assistant manager of the Shanghai branch of the National City Bank of New York, took a dimmer view.

Worried by the advance of Communist troops, the father arranged for the boy's flight and his stay with Maryland relatives. Junior flew unescorted from Shanghai to San Francisco, then to Washington—unruffled, 'cept for that planeside shortage of comic books.

Airlift Supplies Near Record High

Berlin, Nov. 23 (AP).—The combined British-American airlift came within 29 tons of breaking its Berlin supply record today.

In good flying weather the lift made 683 flights into Berlin's airports with 5771 tons of food and fuel.

American officials disclosed today they had an emergency transport plan ready should the Communists go through with their threat to cut off elevated railway service to the western sectors—the only rail service after 6 p. m. Officials did not explain what the plan is.

Soviet sector police today banned the new telephone book issued by the city government because it listed Dr. Johannes Stumm as police president and did not list Communist Paul Markgraf, whom the Russians have designated as police president.

In Frankfurt, meanwhile, the United States Army announced it has smashed a Czechoslovak spy ring with the arrest of approximately 20 persons who had been collecting information on American troops and installations and the activities of Czech refugees, Bavarian political parties and Sudeten Germans from Czechoslovakia.

Reds Hamper Berlin Government, Says U. S.

Paris, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The United States today accused Russia of hampering solution of the Berlin crisis by interfering with the German government of the four-power occupation capital.

A formal statement issued by the United States delegation to the United Nations said that "the actions of Soviet authorities in Berlin are increasingly preventing the lawful city government from exercising its functions."

"Such actions obviously do not contribute to reaching the solution which the president of the Security Council (Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina) and the five members associated with him are seeking to achieve," the statement added.

The declaration was issued in answer to a charge by "authoritative quarters" in Berlin that the situation there had deteriorated so far that Bramuglia's mediation efforts are "doomed."

American U. N. delegates agreed that the situation in the German capital had deteriorated in recent weeks, but they would not concede that mediation efforts are hopeless.

Clay Says Reds Fail in West Germany

Berlin, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today that a Communist effort "to exploit labor unrest in western Germany" had failed.

The Military Governor of United States-occupied Germany said in his semimonthly report to Washington that the Communist-led unions of the Russian zone had tried in vain to take advantage of the recent 24-hour general strike in western Germany.

After the strike, the Communist unions suggested four times that the All-German Union Congress be revived, but western labor officials ignored the Soviet zone suggestion, Clay said.

Clay reported industrial gains in Anglo-American "Bizonia," with steel production setting a postwar record for the fifth consecutive month.

In Belgium

Catholic Leader Seeks New Cabinet

Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 23 (AP).—Former Finance Minister Gaston Eyskens of the Social Christian (Catholic) Party agreed today to try to form a new government after Paul-Henri Spaak failed.

Spaak's coalition government of Socialists and Catholics resigned Friday. He reluctantly accepted the mandate to try to form a new government in the hope of avoiding a crisis which might be solved only by general elections.

Auguste de Schryver, President of the Social Christian Party, said Socialists and Catholics had disagreed on control of European Recovery administration in the new government.

The present crisis started last week when Justice Minister Paul Struys resigned following criticism in Parliament for clemency toward former collaborators of the Germans. His policy was supported by some Catholic members.

Communists Called Liars By Queuille

Paris, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Premier Henri Queuille denounced the Communists today as liars and power-hungry agitators and called on the National Assembly for a vote of confidence in his non-Communist coalition government.

The premier said he wants the lower house of Parliament to indorse both his crackdown on Communist trouble-making and his government's policies as a whole. He asked the Assembly to give him means to punish Communist strike leaders.

Queuille announced that the confidence vote, scheduled originally for today, will be postponed until Wednesday to give all deputies a chance to speak.

Reds Unleash Full Fury in Suchow Fight

Nanking, Nov. 23 (AP).—Chinese Communist columns today struck with renewed fury at Suchow under a cloud cover, reportedly cutting to pieces an army group covering the government's east flank.

The government's air arm, which saved the day last week, was all but paralyzed by low clouds.

The heaviest assault appeared to be coming from the east, where the first Red drive split on the rock-like resistance of Gen. Huang Po-tao's Seventh Army Group at Nienchuang, 33 miles from Suchow.

It was conceded generally in Nanking that Huang's divisions had been almost blasted into extinction. They received the full shock in that first onslaught two weeks ago. By standing firm then, they lost about half of their effectives.

Special U. N. Body Proposed To Settle Arab-Jewish War

Paris, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—The United States today proposed the creation of a special United Nations commission with broad powers to persuade Arabs and Jews to reach a peaceful settlement.

United States Delegate Philip C. Jessup, submitting amendments to Britain's Palestine plan, called for a three-nation conciliation commission to consult with Arabs and Jews on new boundaries for the Holy Land.

Jessup's proposals, if adopted, would materially weaken the British resolution ordering both sides to accept the territorial revisions proposed by Count Folke Bernadotte, assassinated Palestine mediator.

The amendments would eliminate Bernadotte's proposal calling on the Arab nations to recognize the existence of Israel. They would also forbid the U. N. to impose any settlement on the Arabs and Jews unless both sides agree.

Middle Eastern delegates here showed little sign today of being willing to agree on anything.

In the special political committee, Egyptian Delegate Adly Andraos Bey warned that his country would "walk out" of the U.N. if Israel becomes a member.

Experts on U. S. Palestine policy said the amended Anglo-American proposal would indirectly involve recognition of the Jewish state.

While Androas was speaking, Israeli Spokesman Aubrey Eban indicated at another meeting that his country intends to hold on to all the territory granted to it by the U. N. or conquered by its armies.

Jessup told the regular Political Committee today that the United States would support Jewish claims to all territory assigned to Israel by the original partition plan.

However, he reemphasized the statement he made Saturday that Israel must offer an "appropriate exchange" of territory for any extension to her partition boundaries in any area.

Sweden Will Defend to Limit Against Aggressor, Envoy Says

New York, Nov. 23 (Spl.).—Sweden's new Ambassador, Erik Boheman, promised tonight that the Swedish people would defend their democracy to the limit "against a possible aggression and against any encroachment from ideologies which are not ours."

The Ambassador was addressing the Swedish Chamber of Commerce in his first public speech since his appointment to Washington. Previously Boheman had served as Sweden's Ambassador in Paris and London.

"We are now examining with our northern neighbors the possibilities which may exist for mutual aid in military matters," Boheman said.

"We believe that the salvation of Europe and the world rests on two pillars: a will to self-defense against aggression, both morally and militarily, and a common determination to work for economic reconstruction.

"In this respect we have hailed with deep satisfaction the generous and far-sighted policy of the United States embodied in the Marshall Plan. We admire the rapidity and completeness with which this Nation has shouldered the responsibilities which have fallen upon it as a result of the predominant position it now holds in world politics."

The Ambassador said Sweden welcomed the fact that the Marshall Plan entailed "an abandonment, to a certain extent, of national sovereignty." He cautioned the American people not to expect European unity too quickly, but he praised the progress already made as "remarkable."

The Ambassador was hopeful about Sweden's economic prospects, although he said it was essential to export more high-grade iron and steel and other Swedish products.

Italy to Join West Union, Official Says

Paris, Nov. 23 (AP).—Italy eventually will join the Western European Union, an informed Italian official predicted today.

This is indicated, the official said, by the "atmosphere surrounding the conversations" between Italian Premier Alcide de Gasperi and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

The two leaders met for an hour and a half this afternoon for a discussion of "European cooperation."

The Italian informant said he doubted that the Western European Union—meeting here Friday—would immediately extend a formal invitation to Italy.

A reliable source said Schuman sought Italy's formal support for creation of a European parliament. This question will be taken up in the five-power meeting Friday.

Britain is understood to be opposed to formation of the consultative parliament at this time.

Government Grain Buying to Continue

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman yesterday announced that he will revoke his order to end Government buying of grain for export.

Hoffman told reporters President Truman yesterday "made it quite clear" he believes the Agriculture Department should continue buying wheat and corn for Europe.

The Commodity Credit Corporation is now and has been buying all grain for export under the Marshall Plan. Hoffman announced on September 1 that the buying would be left to private traders after December 1. He noted then that the foreign aid act directed that he use private trade channels to the greatest extent possible. He will recall this order in view of Truman's stand.

Since the September 1 announcement, millions of dollars worth of contracts for grain exports have been signed by private exporters.

Hoffman said these contracts "will be honored," but the decision will be left up to Secretary of Agriculture Brannan whether the Commodity Credit Corporation will take over the contracts and, in effect, purchase the grain from private traders for eventual resale to Europe, or whether the present contracts will be allowed to stand.

Vote Is 48-1

FAO Denies Membership To Israel

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Israeli was denied membership in the United Nation Food and Agricultural Organization yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel. The vote was 48 to 1.

At the same time FAO voted to accept Saudi-Arabia as the fifty-eighth member of the world-wide food organization, and granted the Vatican the status as permanent observer at FAO meetings.

The vote on Israeli was protested by Dr. Ludwig Samuel, agricultural adviser to the President of Israeli. Dr. Samuel took exception to the wording of the resolution that referred to "Jewish authorities in Palestine." He contended that Israel was a bona fide state. He refused comment on the action of the conference. Nine countries, including the United States, refused to vote on the measure. The others who abstained from voting were Poland, Czechoslovakia, Uruguay, Guatemala, Ecuador, Honduras, Panama and Finland.

G. S. H. Barton, deputy minister of agriculture in Canada, urged that Israeli be permitted to participate in FAO operations.

The FAO conference will be addressed at 4:30 today by President Truman.

Hoffman, Harriman To Remain on Jobs

President Truman yesterday ended speculation at home and abroad by making it clear that he wanted Paul Hoffman and W. Averell Harriman to carry on in their present jobs.

Hoffman, the Economic Cooperation Administrtior, is a Republican; Harriman's promotion to be Secretary of State had been rumored in case Secretary Marshall retired.

"The President said he wanted me to stay on the job," said Hoffman after a 15-minute talk at the White House. "He volunteered that." He also indicated, according to Hoffman, that Harriman would stay as ECA's special Ambassador in Europe.

Venezuelan Cabinet Quits To End Crisis

Caracas, Venezuela, Nov. 23 (AP). The government crisis in Venezuela was solved today with the resignation of the cabinet of President Romulo Gallegos, a government announcement said.

A spokesman at the presidential palace denied reports from Willemstad, Curacao, that Gallegos was being held prisoner by the army.

The spokesman said the President spent part of the day at Miraflores Palace.

(A radio report from LaGuira, port of Caracas, said army forces led by a Major Mendoza had overthrown the government. It said the country was under complete army control. There was no confirmation of this from Caracas, where censorship is in effect.)

A government bulletin said the ministers quit in order to permit Gallegos to reorganize the cabinet as "he deems most fit."

This was the latest step in the march of events which caused Gallegos last Friday to impose a strict censorship, suspend constitutional guarantees of freedom of the press and speech, and ban political meetings.

Gonzalo Barrios, the presidential secretary, said in a radio address earlier today that "grave circumstances" have "menaced the public peace" in the country. He said Gallegos had asked him to urge the people to retain their "serenity and confidence."

Moore Named New Head of West Point

GEN. BRYANT E. MOORE
West Point's next "CO"

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 23 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore, chief of the Public Information Division of the Army, will head the U. S. Military Academy beginning February 1.

The Army said today Moore will succeed Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, superintendent since September 1945.

Moore has been the Army's public information chief since July 1948. In World War II, he served in both the Pacific and European theaters. Later, he became commanding general of United States occupation troops at Trieste.

Like his predecessor, Moore is a West Point graduate. The 54-year-old general was born in Ellsworth, Me.

Taylor's new assignment will be announced later.

Roger Slaughter, Truman Foe, Indicted Under Lobbying Laws

Slaughter had charged previously that President Truman personally ordered the grand jury investigation for political reasons. He declared that he was retained by the grain interests as an attorney and that the nature of his services did not require registration under the lobbying regulation act.

In Kansas City, Slaughter said the charges "are false, fraudulent and politically inspired, and are so known to those in authority." He said that in September a grand jury that had seen his employment contracts had declined to act. He said he doubts that the grand jury which returned the indictments was given the same information.

At Kansas City, the Associated Press said an official of the Kansas City Board of Trade said the boards who employed Slaughter will stand by him.

Walter R. Scott, executive vice president of the Kansas City Board of Trade, said the boards of trade "know the charges are groundless" and called the Government's action a "politically inspired attack."

He represented Mr. Truman's home district, Missouri's Fifth District, from 1942 to 1946. As a Democratic member of the powerful House Rules Committee he helped to bottle up and defeat many of the President's legislative proposals.

Mr. Truman publicly denounced Slaughter and supported Enos Axtell against him in the Democratic primary in 1946. Axtell defeated Slaughter in the primary but lost to Albert Reeves, jr., a Republican, in the general election.

Yesterday's indictment was the third returned under the lobbying law of 1946. It came as Justice Department attorneys appeared before Judge Edward M. Curran in District Court to defend the previous indictment of Agriculture Commissioners Tom Linder of Georgia and James E. McDonald of Texas on charges of conspiring to influence Congress on farm legislation for their personal profit.

Other Indictments Recalled

The first indictment under the Lobbying Act was returned last March 30 and accused the United States Saving and Loan League of Chicago of failing to register and file required financial statements under the act.

Slaughter was the fourth former or present member of Congress indicted in the past few years.

Three weeks ago, Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, was indicted on charges of padding his congressional office payroll.

Previously, Representative James M. Curley (D. Mass.), now Mayor of Boston, was indicted and served a jail term for wartime fraud, and Representative Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) was convicted of abetting illegal war contract activities of the Garsson munitions combine. May has an appeal pending.

Strike Holds 1500 Aboard Ocean Queen

Aboard the Queen Elizabeth at Southampton, England, Nov. 23 (AP). The world's most luxurious liner lay moored to her pier tonight in a blaze of lights, strikebound with nearly 1500 passengers for America.

Even with the best of food and entertainment the passengers were getting slightly bored at going nowhere even on their island of plenty in the middle of England's austerity.

All the Cunard Line could offer was the hope that they will be able to sail at 4:15 p. m. tomorrow—and only then if the American East Coast longshoremen's strike has ended.

Aboard the giant liner with its richly paneled corridors, comfortable theater and well-stocked bar there was a strange, almost unreal contrast to the drab tenements and sparsely filled shops only a few hundred yards away.

In the dining room, passengers had their foot-long menus—steak, slabs of roast beef, thick slices of ham, out-of-season fruit, lobster, all kinds of dessert. Take your choice.

Ashore it was different. In the little eating establishments along the waterfront there was tea, sandwiches with a thin fish paste, a roll with a bit of cheese, a slice of cake. Hard to find at that.

But even luxury had begun to pall for some. Mostly they were Americans anxious to get back to home, family and job.

"I am a bit downhearted," said Mrs. Elizabeth Clark of Sparrows Point, Baltimore.

"I had been looking ahead to having Thanksgiving Day with my family. We had the turkey ordered and had to cancel it."

Planned to Make Halifax

The Elizabeth was scheduled to sail last Wednesday. The strike in the States brought a three-day postponement and a plan to reroute her to Halifax.

Then a third of the Elizabeth's crew went out on a sympathy strike 70 minutes before sailing time Saturday. That was settled yesterday when the Cunard Line agreed to keep the Queen in port until the New York grievances are settled.

Through it all most of the passengers have stuck to the ship. Only about 100 have trickled ashore seeking air passage.

The delay has cost the line about $140,000, and should the voyage be canceled completely it would cost $250,000.

Pa. Phone Rate Raise Postponed

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 23 (AP).—The State Public Utility Commission today suspended until July 21, 1949, a proposed 25-million-dollar a year increase in telephone rates filed by the Bell Telephone Co. of Pennsylvania.

At the same time the commission ordered an investigation to "determine the fairness and reasonableness" of the increase.

The proposed new rates would have increased monthly charges an average of 77 cents for homes, and $4.02 for business places.

3% of Britons Think U. S. Is Still a Colony

London, Nov. 23 (AP).—Three per cent of the British people think the United States is still one of the colonies, the Colonial Office said today. That, officials said at a news conference, is one of the reasons they're launching a "know the empire" campaign.

Rail, Truck, Express Strikes Now Threatening New York

The employers were mapping court action against two AFL locals of the Teamsters Union, to end the walkout.

Some 2375 drivers, who are demanding 22½ cents hourly pay boosts, were refusing to handle freight for 320 concerns working out of Pennsylvania and New York Central Railroad freight yards.

The Railway Express Agency embargo put between 8000 and 10,000 terminal employes out of work. The agency handles about 200,000 shipments from New York daily.

Army Ships Carrying Christmas Packages

The Army said yesterday that Christmas packages are moving to troops overseas despite the East Coast shipping tieup.

Army transports are being used for movement of Christmas parcels overseas. Troops load and unload them.

The Army said 180,000 pounds of Christmas parcels for Europe have cleared New York Harbor in the last week.

Wage Snag Denied On West Coast

San Francisco, Nov. 23 (AP).—Both sides in the 83-day old West Coast maritime strike denied tonight published reports of a snag on the wage question.

"There have been no offers on wages nor any rejection of offers," said a joint employer-union statement.

The CIO longshoremen were reported earlier to have rejected an "unofficial" wage hike of 13 cents an hour without retroactivity.

French Still Distrust Germany

France wants to see Germany take her rightful place in western Europe, but under strict safeguards, Armand Berard, Minister-Counselor of the French Embassy, said here last night.

"We agree perfectly that German cooperation is necessary to the economic recovery of the continent," he said. "But we do not believe that Germany can yet be entirely trusted, and we think certain guarantees are necessary against a return to German imperialism."

Berard was speaking at the Department of Agriculture auditorium under the auspices of the department's graduate school.

"We also are convinced," he said, "that unless the German problem is settled in a satisfactory way, all efforts to solve that most important problem of all, the unification of Europe, are doomed to failure.

"When we speak of the German danger, we don't think chiefly in military terms. Many years will elapse, we hope, before Germany recovers her military strength. But this was not the main danger which menaced Europe at the time of Hitler's victories.

"After 1940 the Germans developed a plan of economic domination over the continent by which, owing to their great industrial potential, they would have obliged the industries of other countries to be only branches of their own.

"The neighbors of Germany do not want her to recover her economic potential in such a way that she might again utilize it for the pursuit of such a policy. Of this German industrial potential, the main part is situated in the Ruhr. This is why the French government has been insisting on international management of the Ruhr coal, iron and steel industries."

AFL Plans Talks With Machinists

Cincinnati, Nov. 23 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor planned immediate peace talks with the International Association of Machinists, and said today it would offer terms to the CIO and John L. Lewis' miners "at the first opportunity."

President William Green told reporters the AFL was "encouraged to believe we can find a basis of accommodation now" for the return of the 650,000 maachinists. They left the AFL in 1946, capping a 34-year dispute with the carpenters over installing plant machinery.

He announced he would arrange a conference between standing committees of the AFL and machinists immediately on his return to Washington.

The machinists' committee, consisting of Vice President H. A. Hayes and Secretary-Treasurer Eric Peterson, does not include Harvey W. Brown, who led the machinists from the AFL after years of argument with William Hutcheson, boss of the carpenters. Brown retires as the machinists' president next June.

The AFL's sixty-seventh convention, which adjourned yesterday, called upon its officers to work for a unified labor movement. It mentioned specifically meetings with the CIO, Lewis and the machinists. Many of the railroad brotherhoods now are affiliated with the AFL.

Peace overtures to the CIO and Lewis were less hopeful than to the machinists, Green indicated, but he promised to take advantage of the first opening. He agreed the convention had directed him to take the initiative in building for one big labor organization.

Murray Talks New U.S. Union

Richmond, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—The State Supreme Court of Appeals agreed today to review the constitutionality of Virginia's "right to work" or "anticlosed shop" law.

It granted a writ of error to the Newport News Building and Construction Trades Council from a judgment of the Elizabeth City County Circuit Court awarding $350 to Harley A. Hawkins, a printer.

organizations. Others implied high CIO officials approved the raids.

George Baldanzi, executive vice-president of the textile workers, and a key man in the Southern organization drive, fired the heaviest counter-blast.

"We don't have raids in the CIO. We have revolts of workers against Communist domination," the speaker shouted. The majority of delegates rose cheering.

Must "Wipe Our Face"

Funds for organizing campaigns "will go to waste until we can wipe our face and go to America as a 100 per cent American organization," he continued. The cheering increased.

Murray deplored raiding, and assured Flaxer there was nothing personal in his attack.

Murray said Flaxer had come to him less than a year ago and offered to yield his jurisdiction over Federal employes if the CIO would charter a brand-new union in that field. Flaxer rose and said he had not made such an offer, but admitted he discussed the matter with Murray.

Murray went on to say he was prepared to "accept your original suggestion and create by the process of mutual agreement a new international union for Federal employes." A cheer went up from the delegates.

Flaxer's union has members in some State and local governments, besides the Federal Government.

The exchange climaxed a morning in which the delegates demanded repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, and heard an attack on General Counsel Robert Denham of the National Labor Relations Board, and the recent activities of the borrd.

Arthur Goldberg, general counsel of the CIO, led the assault. He said the act thwarted any hope for labor peace, but reserved his main fire for Denham.

"Denham," he asserted, "is miscalled a general counsel. He has abused and warped the authority of his office . . . Denham is going to go."

Labor Act Attacked

The convention then unanimously passed a resolution against the Taft-Hartley Act.

Senator Wayne L. Morse (R., Oreg.) previously had condemned the act. He was the first guest speaker before the convention today.

He said he favored repeal, but pleaded for the CIO to show statesmanship in helping to write a new labor law that would prevent "excesses" by either labor or management.

Murray warned left-wingers that they would have little chance to get their views adopted by the convention. He told them he would not consider any minority reports on resolutions.

Position of Leftists

The Leftists had planned a number of such reports. In fact they had projected one on the Taft-Hartley Act, but withdrew it after hearing Goldberg's attack on Denham.

Murray's ruling did not mean that the Leftists would be denied voice. Even after his announcement they continued to take the floor. What it meant was that in effect they would be arguing for a non-existent cause. Delegates will vote only on majority resolutions as they emerge from committee. Only in the unlikely event that a majority report is turned down will a minority report ever get before the convention.

Flaxer largely surmounted this, however, by arguing his points as general remarks.

Result of Strike

Boeing Files Appeal in Labor Case

By The Associated Press

Boeing Air Plane Co. announced yesterday it had appealed to the Federal courts a National Labor Relations Board decision that the company failed to bargain at its Seattle plant with the International Association of Machinists.

The appeal was filed in the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

In a statement released here, Boeing President William M. Allen said the filing of the appeals serves to suspend the effect of the NLRB order that the company resume bargaining with the union.

Ruling by Board

The board also ordered the company to reinstate all employes who struck in April and restore their seniority rights.

The board ruled that Boeing violated the Taft-Hartley Act by refusing to bargain with the IAM, an independent union, after the strike began April 22, 1948.

About 14,000 Boeing workers joined in the strike. A great many of them have already been reinstated and the plant is back in production.

The union ended the five-month strike on September 13 while awaiting the outcome of the NLRB case.

The board's order directs the company to discharge workers employed after the strike began if it is necessary to give the strikers back their jobs.

Back Pay Ordered

Back pay was ordered for the strikers dating five days after they applied for reinstatement.

The dispute concerned a continuing contract Boeing had with the union.

The company contended the contract could not be ended by the union, and, in any event, the union had failed to give a 60-day contract termination notice, required by the labor law. For this reason, Boeing claimed the strike was illegal.

An NLRB trial examiner had ruled earlier that negotiations for a wage increase extending from January, 1947, until the April, 1948, strike date, constituted sufficient notice to the company that the union wanted to change the contract.

During the strike, the AFL Teamsters Union attempted to organize replacement workers at the Boeing plant. This activity was directed by Dave Beck, executive vice president of the teamsters union.

Regarding the teamsters' part in the dispute, Albert J. Hayes, IAM general vice president, had this to say:

"The board's decision today is Dave Beck's epitaph. He tried to break a strike for the employer and he has failed."

ITU Strike In Chicago A Year Old

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—A year ago Wednesday AFL printers went on strike against Chicago newspapers. Since that time the city's readers have almost forgotten what a regular printed newspaper looks like.

The printers, some 1500 of them, walked off the job November 24, 1947, demanding higher wages and closed shop conditions.

Today they still maintain token picket lines while five daily newspapers continue to publish with a photo-engraving process which bypasses traditional typesetting methods. The process has been refined until today readers are hardly aware of the difference.

Circulation has remained about normal and advertising linage has soared.

Estimates are that the printers have lost wages of more than seven million dollars. The union pays strike wages of $40 a week to unmarried printers and $60 to married men, with additional picket-line benefits.

New Housing Plan Ready for Congress

By The Associated Press

The Administration announced plans yesterday to enlist quick aid from both Congress and private industry to boost housing production and cut housing prices.

Raymond M. Foley, the Government's housing chief, said in a statement the campaign will go forward "immediately."

He emphasized that the program was set forth "after consultation with President Truman."

Foley said the Administration will ask Congress to make a "declaration of national housing policy," including these major features:

1. Renewal of Federal aid to communities for low-rent housing projects for occupancy by low-income families, with preference to World War II veterans.

2. Federal loans and capital grants to help in slum clearance.

3. Financial assistance to farmers for construction of adequate farm dwelling and for repairs.

4. Federal sponsorship of a long-range program of housing research with the help of private industry.

Along with the legislative action, Foley said a Nation-wide "concerted effort" will be made throughout 1949 to gain the cooperation of builders, lenders, labor and other interested groups to stimulate a larger volume of housing at lower costs and rents.

Report Hits Fund Waste In Germany

By the United Press

The Congressional watchdog committee on foreign aid is weighing a confidential report charging that British and French policies in western Germany are "wasting the American taxpayers' money," it was revealed yesterday.

The report was prepared by staff experts of the committee. Its criticism of United States and Allied actions in Germany may have repercussions when the Senate-House group meets December 2 to make recommendations on future handling of the entire European Recovery Program.

A chief complaint in the report is that American officials have failed to assume a "dominant voice" in economic affairs of "Bizonia," the merged British and American occupation zones.

It says the United States is entitled to final authority because it is footing the lion's share of the occupation bill.

The report also criticizes failure of the three powers to "integrate" the French zone with the other two Western occupation areas. It asserts that France has been drawing off the resources of its zone for French domestic use, while the United States has been pumping funds into the French zone to speed its economic recovery.

British officials in Bizonia were said to be administering industries of the Ruhr valley in a way intended to "facilitate nationalization" of the iron and steel works, which Britain favors and the United States opposes.

The report also assails what it calls the failure of the western powers to revise the German plant dismantling and reparations program to conform with "the realities" of European recovery needs.

tion, or during any day of public election, ceremony, or celebration."

The reserves will have a special uniform, and a badge similar to those of the regular police. When qualified they will receive certificates of membership in the corps.

The men will be volunteer civilians, and will be unpaid. They will be trained under the direction of Inspector Storm and Inspector Lloyd E. Kelly. In addition to their 30 hours of basic instruction, their training will include later instruction in specialized subjects.

Police officials said that the reserve corps members will have the power to make arrests in felonies and more serious misdemeanors, like drunken driving and leaving after colliding.

None of the reserves will be used as detectives. At the outset all will rank as privates. They will be assigned to precincts according to where they live, and where they are needed. Later the program may be changed so that even as reserves, the members of the corps will be able to receive promotion to corporal, sergeant, or lieutenant, but no higher than that.

Each applicant will undergo a character test, and meet police physical qualifications. Age limits for the volunteer corps are 21 to 50—a contrast to the 21 to 33 age limits set by the Commissioners yesterday both for policemen and for the policewomen.

Until the Commissioners approved the special recruitment of 80 new policewomen for clerical duties, the age limits for new policewomen had been 25 to 35.

Minimum Weight 140

Physical requirements for the volunteers in the police reserve will include a minimum weight of 140 pounds and the new minimum height of 5 feet 7 inches.

Major Barrett said immediate steps are being taken to recruit the 80 clerical policewomen. He said the Civil Service Commission had reported that several registers of women are available from whom candidates for the police examination can be listed.

Hoover Unit Cites Possible Saving Of $250,000,000

The Government could save 250 million dollars a year by getting the kinks out of its buying system, the Hoover Commission on Government Reorganization reported yesterday.

Former President Herbert Hoover, commission chairman, said that Government buying for its own use is bogged down in costly red tape, failure to plan properly, lack of professionally-qualified purchasing agents and other shortcomings.

"The maze of laws and regulations surrounding the purchasing process is one of the five major flaws in Government study supply procedure which the commission's study has so far identified," he asserted.

He pointed out that half the annual three million purchase orders of civilian agencies are for $10 or less, while the paper work for a single item runs to more than $10.

The supply question is one of more than 20 basic governmental problems which the bipartisan, 12-man commission has been studying under congressional mandate. It is due to report to the new Congress by January 13.

Stethoscope Used to Get Vice Evidence

A policeman, formerly of the vice squad, testified yesterday in District Court that he put a stethoscope to the wall of an apartment here in obtaining evidence leading up to charges that the apartment was a disorderly establishment.

The testimony was given to an all-male jury in the District Court of Judge Richmond B. Keech by Pvt. Miles Richie.

It happened in the trial of Mrs. Margaret Seymour, 56, accused of running the establishment in an apartment at 1801 Calvert st. nw.

Richie said he was assigned to investigate the place and on several occasions saw men entering and leaving. As to the stetoscope-amplified conversations, he was only allowed to tell what Mrs. Seymour said.

He recalled that she read a letter describing a rushing business done in a house in Hawaii "when the fleet was in."

Detectives testified that when they went to Mrs. Seymour's door they were refused admittance.

would have played into the hands of the enemy.

The American VII and XIX Corps advanced so rapidly that in the vicinity of Mons, location of one of the great battles of the First World War, they trapped between them an entire German corps. After a fierce engagement, 25,000 prisoners were taken. In ordinary times this would have been acclaimed as a great victory. But the times were far from ordinary, and the incident passed almost unnoticed in the press.

Plan to Spare Paris Presented Problems

A special problem that became acute toward the end of August was that of determining what to do about Paris. During all preliminary operations we had been at great pains to avoid direct bombing of the French capital. Even in the process of destroying French communications we had, in the Paris region, done this by attacking railway bottlenecks outside rather than terminals inside the city. Pursuing the same general purpose, we wanted to avoid making Paris a battleground and consequently planned operations to cut off and surround the vicinity, thus forcing the surrender of the defending garrison.

In this matter my hand was forced by the action of the Free French forces inside the city. Throughout France the Free French had been of inestimable value in the campaign. They were particularly active in Brittany, but on every portion of the front we secured help from them in a multitude of ways. Without their great assistance the liberation of France and the defeat of the enemy in western Europe would have consumed a much longer time and meant greater losses to ourselves. So when the Free French forces inside the city staged their uprising it was necessary to move rapidly to their support.

French 2d Division Chosen for Honor

For the honor of first entry, General Bradley selected General LeClerc's French Second Division. The veterans of this organization had started at Lake Chad three years before, made an almost impossible march across the Sahara Desert, joined the Eighth Army to participate in the latter part of the African campaign, and now, on August 25, 1944, its commander received the surrender from the German general commanding the Paris garrison. It was a satisfying climax to an odyssey which, in its entire length, carried all the way from central Africa to Berchtesgaden in Germany.

The liberation of Paris on the 25th of August had a great impact on people everywhere. Even the doubters began to see the end of Hitler. By this time enemy losses were enormous. Since our landings three of the enemy's field marshals and one army commander had been dismissed from their posts or incapacitated by wounds. Rommel was badly wounded by one of our strafing planes on July 19. Some months later he committed suicide to escape trial for alleged complicity in the July 20 murder plot against Hitler.

German Losses Mount As March Proceeds

German materiel losses included 1300 tanks, 20,000 other vehicles, 500 assault guns, and 1500 pieces of artillery. In addition the German air forces had suffered extensively. More than 3500 of his aircraft had been destroyed and this in spite of the fact that the Luftwaffe had been seriously depleted before the invasion began.

All along the front we pressed forward in hot pursuit of the fleeing enemy. In four days the British spearheads, paralleled by equally forceful American advances on their right, covered a distance of 195 miles, one of the many fine feats of marching by our formations in the great pursuit across France.

The task on the north comprised three parts. We had to secure a line far enough to the eastward to cover Antwerp and the roads and railways leading out of it toward the front. We had to reduce the German defenses in the areas lying between that city and the sea. Finally, I hoped to thrust forward spearheads as far as we could, to include a bridgehead across the Rhine, if possible, so as to threaten the Ruhr and facilitate subsequent offensives.

Monty's Plan to Rush Into Berlin Vetoed

While we were examining the various factors of the question, Montgomery suddenly presented the proposition that, if we would support his Twenty-First Army Group with all supply facilities available, he could rush right on into Berlin and, he said, end the war. I am certain that Field Marshal Montgomery, in the light of later events, would agree that this view was a mistaken one.

During early September, while returning from a visit to the forward areas, I suffered a minor injury incident to a forced landing on a beach. Caught in a sudden storm, we found it impossible to return to our own little landing strip near headquarters and had no place to land except on a neighboring beach. It was one of the beaches that the Germans had fortified before D-day and had at one time been mined.

This did not add to the comfort of our position but we tried to pull the plane far enough away from the water's edge to prevent its inundation by the rising tide. In doing so, I badly wrenched a knee. My pilot, Lieutenant Underwood, helped me across the beach while I kept an anxious eye on the smooth sand in front of us for any telltale signs of buried explosives. We reached a country road and started the long trek toward headquarters.

Eight GIs in a Jeep Rescue Injured Ike

It was a miserable walk through a driving rain but we had little hope of thumbing a ride because the back road we were traveling was rarely used by our soldiers. However, within a few minutes there came up behind us a jeep into which eight soldiers had managed to crowd.

We flagged them down and the occupants, instantly recognizing me, jumped out to help. They were obviously astounded to see the commanding general in such an out-of-the-way place and limping along in the rain. I asked them to take me to headquarters and so great was their concern that they practically lifted me into the front seat of the jeep. Then, careful to avoid crowding against my injured leg, they allowed no one else except the driver to sit in front. I still do not understand how all the rest of them piled in and on the jeep and managed to get my pilot aboard, but this they did.

For two days I was confined to bed and thereafter was forced, for a time, to carry a plaster cast on my leg. Press representatives noted my absence from headquarters and surmised that I was ill, possibly because of overwork. When a story to this effect appeared in the press I had to publish the details of the affair, with the hope that my wife would not magnify the seriousness of the accident pending receipt of my letter of explanation.

Movement Held Up By Communications

All along the front we felt increasingly the strangulation on movement imposed by our inadequate lines of communication. The Services of Supply had made heroic and effective effort to keep us going to the last possible minute. They installed systems of truck transport by taking over main-road routes in France and using most of these for one-way traffic. These were called Red Ball Highways, on which trucks kept running continuously. Every vehicle ran at least 20 hours a day.

Railway engineers worked night and day to repair broken bridges and track and to restore the operational efficiency of rolling stock. Gasoline and fuel oil were brought onto the Continent by means of flexible pipe lines laid under the English Channel. From the beaches the gas and oil were pumped forward to main distribution points through pipe lines laid on the surface of the ground.

In the months succeeding the conclusion of hostilities I had many opportunities to review various campaigns with the leaders of the Russian Army. Not only did I talk to marshals and generals but on this subject I spent a considerable time with Generalissimo Stalin. Without exception, these Russian officers made one pressing demand upon me. It was to explain the supply arrangements that enabled us to make the great sweep out of our constricted beachhead in Normandy to cover, in one rush, all of France, Belgium, and Luxembourg, up to the very borders of Germany. I had to describe to them our systems of railway repairs and construction, truckage, evacuation, and supply by air.

Russians Call Supply 'Astounding Feat'

They suggested that of all the spectacular feats of the war, even including their own, the Allied success in the supply of the pursuit across France would go down in history as the most astonishing.

On our right we connected up near Dijon with Patch's advancing forces on September 11, just 27 days after the landing in southern France. From that moment onward the only thing standing in the way of the ample supply of all our forces south of Metz was the repair of the railways leading up the Rhone Valley.

On the extreme left the attack against Arnhem went off as planned on the 17th. Three airborne divisions dropped, in column, from north to south. The northernmost one was the British First Airborne Division, while farther southward were the American 82d and 101st Airborne Divisions. The attack began well and unquestionably would have been successful except for the intervention of bad weather.

British Airborne Division Decimated

This prevented the adequate reinforcement of the northern spearhead and resulted finally in the decimation of the British Airborne Division and only a partial success in the entire operation. We did not get our bridgehead, but our lines had been carried well out to defend the Antwerp base.

During the three months beginning September 1 I spent a great portion of my time in travel. The front was constantly broadening and distances were getting greater, so that every visit was time-consuming. Nevertheless, they were valuable and always worth the cost in time and effort.

On one trip during the autumn I stopped briefly in a forward location to talk with several hundred men of a battalion of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division. We were all standing on a muddy, slippery hillside. After a few minutes' visit I turned to go and fell flat on my back. From the shout of laughter that went up I am quite sure that no other meeting I had with soldiers during the war was a greater success than that one. Even the men who rushed forward to help pick me out of the mire could scarcely do so for laughing.

Field of Loneliness In Wake of Battle

There is an old expression, "the nakedness of the battlefield." It is descriptive and full of meaning for anyone who has seen a battle. Except for unusual concentration of tactical activity, such as at a river crossing or an amphibious assault, the feeling that pervades the forward areas is loneliness. There is little to be seen; friend and foe, as well as the engines of war, seem to disappear from sight when troops are deployed for a fight. Loss of control and cohesion are easy, because each man feels himself so much alone, and each is prey to the human fear and terror that to move or show himself may result in instant death. Here is where confidence in leaders, a feeling of comradeship with and trust in them, pays off.

Morale of the combat troops had always to be carefully watched. The capacity of soldiers for absorbing punishment and enduring priviations is almost inexhaustible so long as they believe they are getting a square deal, that under commanders are looking out for them, and that their own accomplishments are understood and appreciated.

Simple Solution To Complex Problem

Once, in Africa, front line troops complained to me that they could get no chocolate bars or anything to smoke, when they knew that these were plentifully issued to the Services of Supply. I queried the local unit commander, who said he had requisitioned these things time and again, only to be told that no transport was available to bring them to the front.

I merely telephoned to the rear and directed that until every forward airfield and front-line unit was getting its share of these items, there would not be another piece of candy or cigarette or cigar issued to anyone in the Supply Services. In a surprisingly short time I received a happy report from the front that their requisitions were being promptly filled.

In the late summer and autumn months of 1944, the Allied armies were fighting their way bitterly up to the Rhine. Their number had grown to 46 divisions; the capture of the port of Antwerp had become a prime necessity if they were to be supplied adequately for the final assault on Hitler's Germany.

General Eisenhower in the next installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published here tomorrow, describes this phase of the campaign in Europe. This was the prelude to the Battle of the Bulge, and here for the first time is the explanation of the Allied commander in chief of the chance which was given to the Nazis to fight their last offensive battle of the war.

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book published by Doubleday & Co. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

School Building Report Submitted To Senate Group

A report on public school buildings yesterday was submitted to the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on the District by Dr. George O. Strayer.

The 161-page report, recommending new school construction, and new utilization of present buildings, will be released to the public Sunday.

Dr. Strayer, director of a comprehensive survey of the public school system here, conferred for more than an hour with Senator Henry Dworshak (R., Idaho), chairman of the committee, and Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (D., Wyom.), who will succeed to the chairmanship in the new Congress.

In March, Dr. Strayer will present his findings on school curriculum, teacher selection and pay, and the financial structure of the school system. The survey was authorized by Congress under a $100,000 appropriation.

Soldiers Shout With Laughter When Eisenhower Slips and Falls Flat in Mud

would have played into the hands of the enemy.

The American VII and XIX Corps advanced so rapidly that in the vicinity of Mons, location of one of the great battles of the First World War, they trapped between them an entire German corps. After a fierce engagement, 25,000 prisoners were taken. In ordinary times this would have been acclaimed as a great victory. But the times were far from ordinary, and the incident passed almost unnoticed in the press.

Plan to Spare Paris Presented Problems

A special problem that became acute toward the end of August was that of determining what to do about Paris. During all preliminary operations we had been at great pains to avoid direct bombing of the French capital. Even in the process of destroying French communications we had, in the Paris region, done this by attacking railway bottlenecks outside rather than terminals inside the city. Pursuing the same general purpose, we wanted to avoid making Paris a battleground and consequently planned operations to cut off and surround the vicinity, thus forcing the surrender of the defending garrison.

In this matter my hand was forced by the action of the Free French forces inside the city. Throughout France the Free French had been of inestimable value in the campaign. They were particularly active in Brittany, but on every portion of the front we secured help from them in a multitude of ways. Without their great assistance the liberation of France and the defeat of the enemy in western Europe would have consumed a much longer time and meant greater losses to ourselves. So when the Free French forces inside the city staged their uprising it was necessary to move rapidly to their support.

French 2d Division Chosen for Honor

For the honor of first entry, General Bradley selected General LeClerc's French Second Division. The veterans of this organization had started at Lake Chad three years before, made an almost impossible march across the Sahara Desert, joined the Eighth Army to participate in the latter part of the African campaign, and now, on August 25, 1944, its commander received the surrender from the German general commanding the Paris garrison. It was a satisfying climax to an odyssey which, in its entire length, carried all the way from central Africa to Berchtesgaden in Germany.

The liberation of Paris on the 25th of August had a great impact on people everywhere. Even the doubters began to see the end of Hitler. By this time enemy losses were enormous. Since our landings three of the enemy's field marshals and one army commander had been dismissed from their posts or incapacitated by wounds. Rommel was badly wounded by one of our strafing planes on July 19. Some months later he committed suicide to escape trial for alleged complicity in the July 20 murder plot against Hitler.

German Losses Mount As March Proceeds

German materiel losses included 1300 tanks, 20,000 other vehicles, 500 assault guns, and 1500 pieces of artillery. In addition the German air forces had suffered extensively. More than 3500 of his aircraft had been destroyed and this in spite of the fact that the Luftwaffe had been seriously depleted before the invasion began.

All along the front we pressed forward in hot pursuit of the fleeing enemy. In four days the British spearheads, paralleled by equally forceful American advances on their right, covered a distance of 195 miles, one of the many fine feats of marching by our formations in the great pursuit across France.

The task on the north comprised three parts. We had to secure a line far enough to the eastward to cover Antwerp and the roads and railways leading out of it toward the front. We had to reduce the German defenses in the areas lying between that city and the sea. Finally, I hoped to thrust forward spearheads as far as we could, to include a bridgehead across the Rhine, if possible, so as to threaten the Ruhr and facilitate subsequent offensives.

Monty's Plan to Rush Into Berlin Vetoed

While we were examining the various factors of the question, Montgomery suddenly presented the proposition that, if we would support his Twenty-First Army Group with all supply facilities available, he could rush right on into Berlin and, he said, end the war. I am certain that Field Marshal Montgomery, in the light of later events, would agree that this view was a mistaken one.

During early September, while returning from a visit to the forward areas, I suffered a minor injury incident to a forced landing on a beach. Caught in a sudden storm, we found it impossible to return to our own little landing strip near headquarters and had no place to land except on a neighboring beach. It was one of the beaches that the Germans had fortified before D-day and had at one time been mined.

This did not add to the comfort of our position but we tried to pull the plane far enough away from the water's edge to prevent its inundation by the rising tide. In doing so, I badly wrenched a knee. My pilot, Lieutenant Underwood, helped me across the beach while I kept an anxious eye on the smooth sand in front of us for any telltale signs of buried explosives. We reached a country road and started the long trek toward headquarters.

Eight GIs in a Jeep Rescue Injured Ike

It was a miserable walk through a driving rain but we had little hope of thumbing a ride because the back road we were traveling was rarely used by our soldiers. However, within a few minutes there came up behind us a jeep into which eight soldiers had managed to crowd.

We flagged them down and the occupants, instantly recognizing me, jumped out to help. They were obviously astounded to see the commanding general in such an out-of-the-way place and limping along in the rain. I asked them to take me to headquarters and so great was their concern that they practically lifted me into the front seat of the jeep. Then, careful to avoid crowding against my injured leg, they allowed no one else except the driver to sit in front. I still do not understand how all the rest of them piled in and on the jeep and managed to get my pilot aboard, but this they did.

For two days I was confined to bed and thereafter was forced, for a time, to carry a plaster cast on my leg. Press representatives noted my absence from headquarters and surmised that I was ill, possibly because of overwork. When a story to this effect appeared in the press I had to publish the details of the affair, with the hope that my wife would not magnify the seriousness of the accident pending receipt of my letter of explanation.

Movement Held Up By Communications

All along the front we felt increasingly the strangulation on movement imposed by our inadequate lines of communication. The Services of Supply had made heroic and effective effort to keep us going to the last possible minute. They installed systems of truck transport by taking over main-road routes in France and using most of these for one-way traffic. These were called Red Ball Highways, on which trucks kept running continuously. Every vehicle ran at least 20 hours a day.

Railway engineers worked night and day to repair broken bridges and track and to restore the operational efficiency of rolling stock. Gasoline and fuel oil were brought onto the Continent by means of flexible pipe lines laid under the English Channel. From the beaches the gas and oil were pumped forward to main distribution points through pipe lines laid on the surface of the ground.

In the months succeeding the conclusion of hostilities I had many opportunities to review various campaigns with the leaders of the Russian Army. Not only did I talk to marshals and generals but on this subject I spent a considerable time with Generalissimo Stalin. Without exception, these Russian officers made one pressing demand upon me. It was to explain the supply arrangements that enabled us to make the great sweep out of our constricted beachhead in Normandy to cover, in one rush, all of France, Belgium, and Luxembourg, up to the very borders of Germany. I had to describe to them our systems of railway repairs and construction, truckage, evacuation, and supply by air.

Russians Call Supply 'Astounding Feat'

They suggested that of all the spectacular feats of the war, even including their own, the Allied success in the supply of the pursuit across France would go down in history as the most astonishing.

On our right we connected up near Dijon with Patch's advancing forces on September 11, just 27 days after the landing in southern France. From that moment onward the only thing standing in the way of the ample supply of all our forces south of Metz was the repair of the railways leading up the Rhone Valley.

On the extreme left the attack against Arnhem went off as planned on the 17th. Three airborne divisions dropped, in column, from north to south. The northernmost one was the British First Airborne Division, while farther southward were the American 82d and 101st Airborne Divisions. The attack began well and unquestionably would have been successful except for the intervention of bad weather.

British Airborne Division Decimated

This prevented the adequate reinforcement of the northern spearhead and resulted finally in the decimation of the British Airborne Division and only a partial success in the entire operation. We did not get our bridgehead, but our lines had been carried well out to defend the Antwerp base.

During the three months beginning September 1 I spent a great portion of my time in travel. The front was constantly broadening and distances were getting greater, so that every visit was time-consuming. Nevertheless, they were valuable and always worth the cost in time and effort.

On one trip during the autumn I stopped briefly in a forward location to talk with several hundred men of a battalion of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division. We were all standing on a muddy, slippery hillside. After a few minutes' visit I turned to go and fell flat on my back. From the shout of laughter that went up I am quite sure that no other meeting I had with soldiers during the war was a greater success than that one. Even the men who rushed forward to help pick me out of the mire could scarcely do so for laughing.

Field of Loneliness In Wake of Battle

There is an old expression, "the nakedness of the battlefield." It is descriptive and full of meaning for anyone who has seen a battle. Except for unusual concentration of tactical activity, such as at a river crossing or an amphibious assault, the feeling that pervades the forward areas is loneliness. There is little to be seen; friend and foe, as well as the engines of war, seem to disappear from sight when troops are deployed for a fight. Loss of control and cohesion are easy, because each man feels himself so much alone, and each is prey to the human fear and terror that to move or show himself may result in instant death. Here is where confidence in leaders, a feeling of comradeship with and trust in them, pays off.

Morale of the combat troops had always to be carefully watched. The capacity of soldiers for absorbing punishment and enduring priviations is almost inexhaustible so long as they believe they are getting a square deal, that under commanders are looking out for them, and that their own accomplishments are understood and appreciated.

Simple Solution To Complex Problem

Once, in Africa, front line troops complained to me that they could get no chocolate bars or anything to smoke, when they knew that these were plentifully issued to the Services of Supply. I queried the local unit commander, who said he had requisitioned these things time and again, only to be told that no transport was available to bring them to the front.

I merely telephoned to the rear and directed that until every forward airfield and front-line unit was getting its share of these items, there would not be another piece of candy or cigarette or cigar issued to anyone in the Supply Services. In a surprisingly short time I received a happy report from the front that their requisitions were being promptly filled.

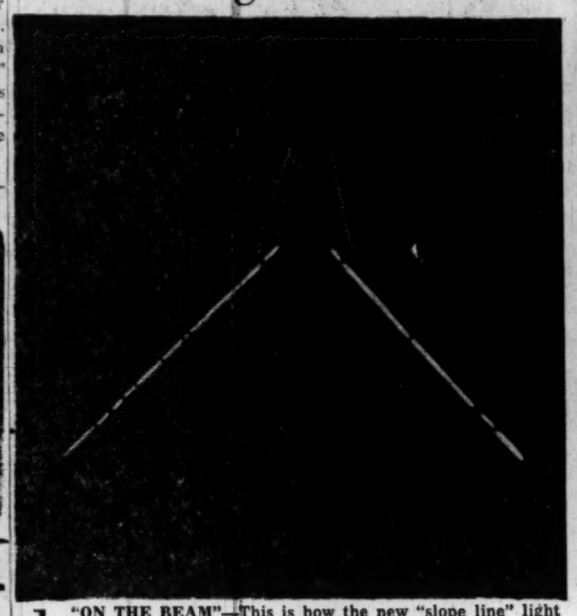
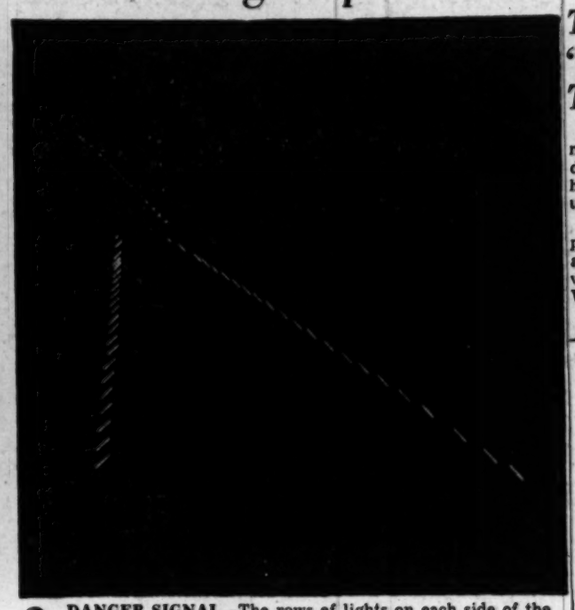
Auto Headlights Now Guide Pilots to Landing Strips . . .



1. "ON THE BEAM"—This is how the new "slope line" light system—developed by two CAA engineers—looks at night to a pilot making a proper approach to a landing strip. Note that they form unbroken lines leading into each side of runway



2. DANGER SIGNAL—The rows of lights on each side of the runway appear broken to the pilot when he comes in too high or too low, or off to one side. The system, made from low-cost auto headlights, will be installed at airports over the Nation

3. IT'S THIS SIMPLE—The very simplicity of the "slope light" system at first made officials skeptical of its usefulness. Ten ordinary sealed-beam auto headlights are installed about a foot apart on a steel planking from surplus landing mats. Thirty of the sets of 10 are set up about 100 feet apart on the approaches to landing strips and the use of such ordinary ingredients undoubtedly had much to due with the skepticism and humor with which it was once treated. Scientists were trying to find a light that would shine through fog.

After much work on the problem, however, Dr. Irving Langmuir, top-flight General Electric scientist, concluded that if "God hadn't made a light that can shine through fog, probably we can't," CAA engineers said yesterday.

The "slope line" system was held to be the best plan tested to aid the pilot to the runway after he has come down through the "soup" and has a little visibility a few hundred feet above the field.

Two Rows of 30 Lights

It consists of two rows of 30 lights set about 100 feet apart, forming a kind of open "V" funnel to the runway. Each light consists of 10 ordinary seal beam auto headlights fastened about a foot apart on a strip of steel planking. One end is on the ground, the other attached to about a 10-foot post, at an angle of 45 degrees. Special filaments in each headlight enable 200-watt bulbs to be used.

When the pilot is making a proper approach, the beacons form two continuous lines of light. If he is off to the side, or too high or low, he sees each light bar separately. And they point the way to fly to correct his error.

Exceptionally low cost of installation and maintenance was one reason for approval of the system by the air navigation committee, a Munitions Board agency that represents the Air Force, Navy and civil flying agencies. It is $50,000 an airport as compared with $200,000 or more for other systems.

How did you get the idea for the plan, Pearson was asked?

"One main reason was our low experimental budget," he said. "We could afford to buy some auto lights, and scavenge some steel mats and posts, but not much else."

Air Force Preparing Generals Promotion List

The Air Force said yesterday it is getting up a list of officers for promotion to brigadier general or major general when vacancies occur in those ranks.

A selection board of high Air Force officers is meeting secretly at the pentagon for 10 days to discuss who should get the new stars.

The records of 600 officers are being reviewed for brigadier general promotions. Records of 100 others are being scanned for promotions to major general.

Breen Plans Public Apology

Ashland, Wis., Nov. 23.—Singer Bobby Breen said tonight he is "writing a letter of apology right away to all the people" involved in a false search for him while his plane was reported missing in northwestern Wisconsin.

The 21-year-old former child movie star, interviewed by telephone at the sheriff's office here, said he was going to Hayward "to try to straighten things out there, too."

Breen spent the weekend at a Glidden, Wis., hotel after making a forced landing in a chartered plane. He and his pilot, Kenneth Thompson, were the object of a wide search by air and on the ground through snow-clogged woods during the 36 hours they spent at Glidden, Breen under an assumed name.

He told authorities neither he nor Thompson had any idea they were being sought, and said he had tried unsuccessfully to reach his manager by telephone.

Breen took issue with Sheriff William Sands, who called the affair "a publicity gag that's going to require a lot of explaining."

District Attorney Winslow Davis of Sawyer County said he had no plans to pursue the investigation

Truman Issues 'Thank You' Note To Well-Wishers

President Truman asked the newspapers and the radio yesterday to carry a "thank you" from him to everyone who has congratulated him on his election victory.

In a statement, the President explained that he could not answer all the messages he has received without interfering with necessary White House work.

"I therefore ask all the fine citizens from whom I have heard to accept this assurance of my appreciation," Mr. Truman said. "Their letters and telegrams have quickened my sense of responsibility as we enter together upon the hard tasks that lie ahead.

"From the depths of my heart I thank one and all."

Presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said that more than 50,000 letters and more than 10,000 telegrams of congratulations have been received and others are still pouring in.

Charter Committee To Fight Any Suit

The Montgomery County Charter Committee last night decided to fight any lawsuit brought to block the county's January 6 charter council election.

Col. Norman B. Ames, committee president, was empowered, at a special meeting in Rockville, Md., to appoint counsel to serve without fee in the defense.

Ames said the committee "will defend the charter election against any suit to the limit." This includes following it through the Circuit Court and possibly the Court of Appeals, it was pointed out.

Meanwhile, Charles H. Jamison, the only Montgomery County commissioner who is a Democrat, flatly refused yesterday to join his four Republican colleagues in filing suit to forestall the charter council election.

At the same time, the official denied he cast a telephone vote on November 16 when the action was voted by the Republican commissioners. He did not attend the meeting and was unaware of the action taken until the following day, he said.

Explaining his position, Jamison said he was "willing to go along" with the voters who adopted a charter form of government on November 2.

"I voted against the charter and worked against it, but now that it is in I am not going to try and block it," he said. "I don't like a squealer," he added.

Jamison informed the commission of his stand in a 15-minute closed session during the regular meeting in Rockville.

The suit to which he referred was one originally proposed by F. Barnard Welsh, legal adviser to the County Commissioners. Expected to be filed this week, the suit will be based on a provision of the State constitution providing for quadrennial elections.

If the commissioners' action is successful, a charter council election would be delayed until 1950, the next regularly scheduled election for State and county officers.

The board also yesterday accepted the resignation of Bethesda Police Pvt. Franklin B. Cook and appointed Bernard Frenzel of Damascus as personal property assessor at a $3750 annual salary.

A public hearing was set for January 4 on the proposed fire prevention code.

The board approved a permit application of the Olney Cooperative Nursery School to be conducted in St. John's Community Parish Hall, Olney, Md.

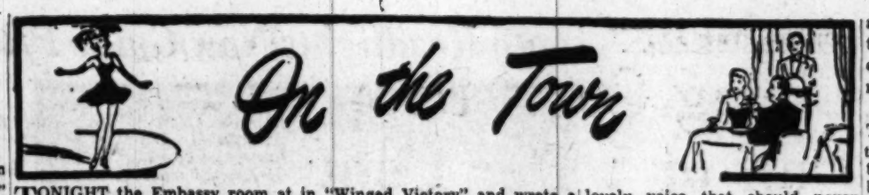
The James Gibbons Co., Relay, Md., was awarded a contract for a $27,000 bridge on the Barnesville-Dickerson rd., about 1½ miles from Barnesville.

Boy, 4, Burned Severely 2 Weeks Ago, Clings to Life

Plucky Michael Rector, 4, was reported still holding on to life last night at Casualty Hospital, in critical condition from burns that virtually enveloped his body nearly two weeks ago.

Hospital physicians said the lad suffered third-degree burns covering 70 per cent of his body. Normally, they said, burns of such degree over 30 or more per cent of the body prove fatal.

The boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Rector of 613 Elliott st. ne., ran home on November 12, his clothing aflame. Other youngsters, he told his parents, put lighted matches to his clothing in a nearby garage. Police said they were unable to verify the boy's account.



TONIGHT the Embassy room at the Statler hops back on the entertainment bandwagon with one of America's top-flight comedy stars, Peter Lind Hayes. Peter is a boyish-looking 32-year-old who's done just about everything in comedy routines that one person can do. He was born in San Francisco, raised in Illinois and schooled in New York State. At sweet 16 Peter decided that school wasn't half as interesting as the vaudeville stage and went on tour over the country. Later he and his actress mother, Grace Hayes, opened a club in H'wood where stars used to drop in and do a bit of off-stage on-staging for free. Of course the customers loved it and the talent budget was almost nil.

Hayes

While the club was open Peter had a bang-up chance to study the different Hollywoodites and work up satires on them and their lives. It went over so well that it's still a mainstay in his act today. In addition to his Hollywood characters he's dreamed up a couple of imaginary figures called "Punchy Callahan" and "The Drunk" that usually wow the audience.

While Peter was in the Army he entertained about a million men throughout the Pacific area, wrote "Hello Mom" and "Soldiers With Wings," a couple of Army recruiting shows, played the lead in "Winged Victory" and wrote a stack of song hits. Less than two months after the Army chipped their chains from his wrists he was back on the circuit with a complete new routine sprinkled with humor he'd picked up in the service. The service routine was sure-fire stuff with all the former servicemen and Peter was back on top of the heap in no time.

At the moment he is practically a man of leisure, since he only has contracts with Universal Pictures, Decca records, the Ford Radio Show and a two week engagement at the Statler. Wife Mary Healey will be in the act, too.

Club Cairo is still holding Bobby Brandt over. The young tap dancer has made a nightly hit with crowds. Bob Shepard, who's been in town before, tees off in the job of comedy M. C. He just closed at the Casa Seville on Long Island. The Calvert sisters team up on their songs and Jeff Noble does a solo singing act. Of course the Shirley Page chorus line will be there, too. The show opens tomorrow night for the Thanksgiving patrons.

It's holdover week in the Shoreham Blue room, too. Bob Bromley, who's probably the cleverest man with a puppet you've ever seen, has added a puppet on a trapeze suspended from the ceiling for this week's show. The puppet does everything its circus counterpart has ever done. The Costello twins are also held over, and for the second time. Their routines are much on the musical comedy side and easy to watch. Marion Stevens turns up with a lovely voice that should never have to sing the popular tunes she has to to keep the crowd happy. Her operatic and musical comedy numbers show a lot of training mixed with plenty of natural ability.

TOMORROW'S the day for the yearly gastronomical orgy followed closely by Pepto Bismol and various other bits of comfort for the overconfident gourmet. Prices in the different spots are pretty close to last year's and the few increases made have been small. Only one spot that we know of has gone down, that being the Hamilton Hotel with dinner at $2.75. The others that follow are serving turkey with various degrees of fixings. The Roger Smith, Sheraton and Raleigh hotels will feed you for $2.75, the Ambassador for $2.50 and the Merry-Land Club for $2.25. The $3 and up places are as follows: Normandy Farm, adults $4; Watergate Inn, $3.75; Mayflower, $4; Carlton, $4.50; the Colony Restaurant, $3.50. Low spot for the day in prices as far as we know is the Press Cafeteria at a mere $1.25. This is, by all means, not a complete list, we've only tried to give you a sample of what you can expect on the bill side of the meal.

We wish all of you a very happy Thanksgiving Day and send along the reminder that there's more than just a plateful of turkey to be thankful for this week in this country.

Rent Increase Plea Opposed by Truman's Pilot

President Truman's personal pilot told Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson yesterday his Ordway Gardens landlords cut off the water at his apartment for three days while he was flying Secretary of State Marshall to and from the Moscow Conference of Foreign Ministers.

Maj. Elmer F. Smith, 2730 Ordway st. nw., said his wife and two children were greatly inconvenienced and he didn't think the owners were entitled to an increase of approximately 10 per cent in rent on the 250 apartments there. Representatives of 171 tenants charge the management showed favoritism in decorating some apartments and not others, and generally failed to provide the type of service to which the tenants were entitled.

The management asserted costs had increased $21,000 a year since rent ceilings were set in 1944.

Living Costs Drop Half of 1 Per Cent and 2 per cent for evaporated milk more than offsetting a slight increase for cheese.

Fruits and vegetable prices here declined by 2 per cent.

The October index is just below the 173.7 July index—so the 338,000 employes of General Motors Corp. whose pay is partially dependent on the index, get neither a pay boost nor a decrease.

G. M.'s contract with the CIO provides that workers paid by the hour get a penny an hour more or less a penny, whenever the Government index fluctuates 1.14 points. On September 1 rises in the index gave GM workers a 3-cent wage increase to $1.64 an hour. But the change in the latest index is too small, either way, to alter the $1.64 average wage rate.

The October living cost decline was attributed by the Bureau of Labor Statistics to a substantial and general drop in the retail price of foods. This decline "more than offset increases in all other major groups" of the consumer cost items, the BLS said.

It was the third consecutive month of falling prices for foods.

The October living cost index is 73.6 per cent higher than the 1935-39 average. It is 6 per cent above a year ago, 30.2 per cent above June, 1946, when wartime price controls were relaxed, and 76.1 per cent above August, 1939, when Germany invaded Poland.

The bureau listed a number of food items with lower retail prices, including meat, butter, fruits and vegetables, cereals and fats and oils. All classes of food except fish, eggs and beverages declined.

Clothing Prices Rose

Clothing prices went up in October as did house furnishings, men's haircuts, rents and some utility rates, the bureau reported. Average retail food costs in October were 2.4 per cent below the peak of July, 1948, but still were 5 per cent above a year ago.

The BLS said that the largest rent increases in October were reported in Detroit, Kansas City and Portland, Oreg. For the country as a whole, rents have increased 3.3 per cent from a year ago, but less than 1/4 per cent since August, 1939.

Nourse, whom the President named to plan anti-inflation strategy, said he would work with the Secretaries of the Treasury, Commerce, Labor, Agriculture, Interior and other agencies.

Final decisions are up to the President, who will deterine just what sort of program will be presented to Congress.

Nourse has not been known as a New Deal type of economic planner but he has shown a willingness to favor economic controls "when necessary."

He said recently he believed the idea of such controls "cannot be divorced from other policies of the Government."

Earlier this month he said he felt the "Government should stand ready to introduce those measures of finance and control which will minimize the disturbing effects . . . on the economy" of military spending.

And he added that the public should make necessary sacrifices and "accept the disciplines which are entailed" by such spending.

Yesterday's cost of living report—and other signs—indicate that Nourse's job might be a comparatively easy one—that the inflationary spiral might end before the next Congress convenes. However, officials were keeping their fingers crossed because similar signs appeared in 1947 and early 1948, and proved to be wrong.

One top Washington official expressed belief that inflationary forces are still somewhat stronger than the deflationary tendencies, although he said they were closer to a balance than at any time since the war.

Spiral May Resume

He said the inflationary spiral is likely to start upward again after the present period of "adjustment."

But he added that psychological factors could have more influence than all the facts, figures and economic forecasts.

"If 140 million people decide one day that the day of high prices is over, then it is over—irrespective of what the facts and figures are and what the economists say," he said.

Nourse said it was too early to say what the program would be, but he told a reporter it would be along the lines of the Democratic platform and Mr. Truman's already expressed policies.

The President has asked for standby powers to restore price controls and ration scarce materials if necessary.

Nourse was named to the chairmanship of the Economic Advisory Council when the agency was created in 1946. He has been both a teacher and writer in the field of economics. He is a former director of the Institute of Economics of the Brookings Institution, a privately financed research organization.

He is 65, and a native of Lockport, N. Y. He said yesterday President Truman telephoned him from Key West, Fla., and asked him to take over the new planning job.

Thanksgiving Costs Compared

The Bureau of Labor Statistics gave the following breakdown of its cost-estimate of a Thanksgiving meal for an average four-person Washington family, and comparisons with other years.

November, 1945, was the last OPA price-controlled Thanksgiving Day. Figures in parenthesis opposite the food items denote the amount the average family of four will consume for the meal, based on estimates of the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Human Nutrition and Home Economics. "Unit" means unit of sale for price quoted:

Slayer of Girl, 11, May Win Appeal At State Expense

Baltimore, Nov. 23 (AP).—It took some legal manipulating today to get an appeal started for Eugene H. James, condemned slayer of an 11-year-old girl.

The 31-year-old janitor has refused to sign any papers since his conviction, which came largely on the basis of a signed confession.

Judge Herman M. Moser granted an attorney permission to sign a pauper's oath for James today. This paves the way for taking the case to the Court of Appeals at State expense.

Judge Moser, sitting without a jury, convicted James of first degree murder in connection with the knife slaying on July 6 of Marsha Brill and sentenced him to death by hanging.

The girl was on a bicycle ride with two playmates in the neighborhood near Pimlico Race Track. James also is under indictment in Washington for the knife slaying of 11-year-old Carol Bardwell June 27. Carol also was riding her bicycle in Rock Creek Park near her home.

'Silent Guest' Campaign Launched by Gov. Lane

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—Governor Lane is asking Marylanders to set a place at their Thanksgiving tables for a "silent guest."

The extra place would denote that a family is taking part in the American silent guest campaign to buy food for needy Europeans. Money that the additional meal would cost is donated to the campaign, which runs from Thanksgiving to Christmas.

Maryland VFW Chief Reenlists in Army

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—George E. Ridenour, 29-year-old Maryland State commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, reenlisted in the Army today.

Capt. John E. McClure, commanding officer of the Hagerstown recruiting district, said Ridenour would be assigned to the recruiting office here as a technical sergeant.

Council Votes Hospital Fund ing but it must lie over for two weeks for final action.

Hospital President David S. Haddock, who attended the meeting, said the hospital's board of directors had approved unanimously the committee report at a special meeting Monday night.

Committee Member Albert A. Smoot explained the purpose of the audit and citizens' committee by declaring:

"The hospital has to be kept open but we don't want this thing to happen every year. Let's start getting facts so we can build much more securely for the future."

Closed Session Held On HSA Proposals

In the District, representatives of the Community Chest Federation the Hospital Council of the Greater Washington Area and the Hospital Service Agency met in closed session last night over public proposals to scrap HSA, hospital certifying agency of the Federation.

All refused comment at the meeting's close, despite word earlier in the day that the Hospital Council would make public its point-by-point plan to effect dissolution of HSA. Secret negotiations on the controversy were favored by Edward Keyes, director of the Community Chest Federation.

The HSA abandonment move has been announced as "approved in principle" by the Hospital Council.

Collector's Item

Last summer the press gave an enormous amount of space to the story of Elizabeth Bentley and the Chambers-Hiss controversy. There were some who thought the newspapers went off the deep end in their efforts to keep the public informed as to these highly sensational affairs. In the opinion of A. J. Liebling, writing in the New Yorker, however, the press failed to touch on some of the most dramatic and significant incidents unfolded by the Committee on Un-American Activities and left some of the choicest tidbits of committee repartee undisclosed. We make no pretense of having read all the stories on this astounding performance, but if the incidents highlighted by Mr. Liebling remained unreported, the only proper response from the press will be touche.

One reason, of course, for the incomplete reporting of these hearings was the committee's resort to executive sessions. When the committee meets behind closed doors, its members give the press only so much of the testimony as they wish the public to hear, which is a powerful argument against secrecy. An official record of the hearings from July 31 to September 9, covering 878 pages, was published some weeks ago, however, and this comprehensive outline of the Thomas Committee's findings and its antics certainly has not been given the attention it deserves.

One incident revealed by this voluminous text is ample reward for a good deal of rummaging. In a closed hearing on September 8 Chairman Thomas asked Maurice Braverman to become a witness when he appeared as counsel for another witness. Mr. Braverman protested that he had not been subpenaed and claimed that, if he appeared as a witness, he would have the right to be represented by counsel. Mr. Thomas, who has since been indicted on charges of padding his payroll, made this classic response:

> The rights you have are the rights given you by this committee. We will determine what rights you have got and what rights you have not got before this committee.

Whether or not this totalitarian utterance was a slip of the tongue, it reveals perhaps better than anything else could the nature of the hearing the committee conducted. The pity is that the comprehensive record of the hearings is not available to the public. Under printing restrictions applicable to all congressional committees, only 1000 copies of the bulky volume were printed for members of Congress, the press, witnesses and governmental agencies. A larger printing can be authorized only by joint action of the House and Senate, except that the Government Printing Office may reprint the volume for sale at $1.75. Demand for it will doubtless continue to be heavy because of the information it contains about Communist activity in this country as well as for its disclosure of the committee's bungling methods. Neither newspaper stories nor New Yorker articles can take the place of this full text, and we hope our readers will press for a reprinting.

Yale And Amherst

The first Negro ever to play football at Yale University has just been elected captain of the 1949 varsity team. This is a personal victory for the new captain, Levi Jackson, and for his race; but far beyond that, it is a victory for the point of view that a man's worth is determined by his accomplishments and not by his color. In other words, Mr. Jackson was elected not because he is a Negro or in spite of the fact, but because he is an all-round good player, student and citizen. His recognition is something of which whites and Negroes together can be proud.

This instance of practical democracy at Yale throws in even sharper relief the courage of members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity at Amherst College in defying tradition to pledge a Negro. For this "violation" of an unwritten rule of the fraternity, the Amherst chapter has been summarily suspended by the national executive council, but local members have evidenced their intention to stand their ground even if it means losing their charter. Their action is not without precedent; several years ago a fraternity chapter at Bowdoin College initiated a Negro and eventually was upheld by the national organization.

The subject is admittedly a touchy one, involving many social implications. But, as Mr. Ernest K. Lindley pointed out on this page Monday in a letter urging reconsideration by the Phi Kappa Psi national organization, the condemnation of "unfraternal conduct" is a grotesque perversion of both language and principle. In their finest sense, personal relationships do not admit of arbitrary barriers of race, and fraternities which continue such barriers solely on the basis of old taboos are likely to find their justification for existence eroding away.

Issue In Strategy

Our readers haven't got to the point yet, but the issue in General Eisenhower's Crusade in Europe which British military writers have reopened will come along soon, and is already available in the book version. It refers to the Battle of the Bulge. At the time, if you remember, there was an outcry against the supreme command for having been caught napping, though General Marshall counseled patience, saying that the Germans had merely anticipated their certain defeat. Enough knowledge was not available at the time to assay the over-all strategy of the conquest of Germany after France had been liberated. What the British are fulminating about is that instead of chasing the Germans with a single army, General Eisenhower chose to adopt what was called a "broad front strategy," using all his troops and the invaders of southern France besides. The line was thus thinned, enabling Rundstedt to make his 50-mile thrust through the Ardennes Forest in December, 1944, delaying victory, and losing the political war to Soviet Russia.

Ralph Ingersoll in his Top Secret was the first writer, so far as we are aware, to criticize the broad front strategy. He writes of the halt that came in the Eisenhower chase from the Seine to the Rhine as a result of inability to keep up supply. Two proposals were then put forward, one by General Montgomery and the other by General Bradley. The former, throwing his customary caution to the winds, wanted Eisenhower to allot all available supplies to his Twenty-first Army Group for a northward drive. Bradley wanted the supplies for a push south with his Twelfth Army Group. Here was a dilemma for Eisenhower, and it is explained by General Montgomery's own chief of staff, General de Guingand, who, in his memoirs, supports Eisenhower. The Montgomery proposal was a terrific gamble, and if it had not come off, "the supreme commander would have been in for a difficult time. What would his commanders and troops who had been 'grounded' say about it? Even more important was the matter of national opinion and national pride; what would the people of America have said if Montgomery had been given these resources and yet failed?" Bradley also was denied, and it was this denial that aroused Ingersoll's questioning of General Eisenhower as a great commander, who, according to Fuller, is the man with that "flash of genius which tells him when to take risks and when to go forward slowly."

The British have now taken up the Ingersoll criticism in most of their reviews of Eisenhower's record. Eisenhower himself does not go into detail about the decision beyond saying, "I am certain that Field Marshal Montgomery, in the light of later events, would agree that this view was a mistaken one." He compliments him on his enthusiasm, but says that "to support his proposal would have meant stopping dead for weeks all units except the Twenty-first Army Group (Montgomery). But he did not understand the impossible situation that would have developed along the rest of our great front when he, having outrun the possibility of maintenance, was forced to stop or withdraw." There is nothing about General Bradley's counterproposal. Indeed, General Eisenhower gives the impression that General Bradley thought the same way as Eisenhower did, dwelling on the necessity for more port facilities in the rear.

As for personalities, Eisenhower seems to bend over backward in bestowing praise, and, contrary to the British charge that he belittles the British, refers glowingly to "the Allied soldier" and includes a letter from General Montgomery of lavish gratitude to the supreme commander "for keeping me on the rails in difficult and stormy times." General Eisenhower was well aware of the risk he ran in the Ardennes, but, for overall reasons, decided to take it. His job in managing a coalition was as much that of a statesman as that of a supreme commander; it did not extend, in his view of his function, to fighting a political war. Thus, while he could have got to Berlin first on his own broad front schedule, he was restrained because of its lack of military value, and this criticism of him ought rather to extend to the political managers of the war for not realizing that, as soon as France was liberated, the war had entered a political domain.

False Labels

Hard cases make bad law, it is said, and that probably accounts for the 5-to-4 division of the Supreme Court in the Pure Food and Drug Act decision it handed down on Monday. The issue was a very narrow one. Lelord Kordel was found guilty on 20 counts of introducing misbranded drugs into interstate commerce. Five judges upheld the verdict in spite of the fact that in some cases the drugs in question and the false "labels" were shipped separately. Justices Black, Frankfurter, Murphy and Jackson dissented as to 13 of the counts based on separate shipment of drugs and literature regarding their use, because they did not think the offense bore sufficient relationship to interstate commerce to fall under the provisions of the Federal Act.

There is always danger, of course, in judicial stretching of an act of Congress to cover cases that were never intended to be covered. "But there is no canon," as Justice Douglas pointed out in the majority opinion, "against using common sense in reading a criminal law, so that strained and technical constructions do not defeat its purpose by creating exceptions from or loopholes in it." Had the court exonerated Kordel because false literature designed to be passed out along with his drugs had been shipped separately and at different times from the drugs themselves, widespread abuse of an important law for protection of the public health might have followed. Since the drugs and the misleading information about them had a common origin and a common destination, it seems to us that the court was justified in looking at the whole transaction. Surely the purpose of Congress must have been to protect the public against any deception in the sale of drugs through the instrumentalities of interstate commerce.

Landslide Psychology

If Americans frequently fail to maintain a sense of proportion about election returns, the fault is not wholly their own. Our electoral machinery grossly magnifies the victory of the winner and exaggerates the defeat of the loser. In the recent upset, President Truman won 303 electoral votes against 189 for Governor Dewey, a result which gives the impression of a sweeping triumph. Actually the popular vote for Mr. Truman was 23,641,072 and for Mr. Dewey 21,584,868.

The exaggeration of the electoral vote comes from the bad practice of giving all the votes of each State to the candidate with the highest popular vote in that State. In Illinois, for example, the count stood at 1,990,635 for Mr. Truman to 1,959,439 for Mr. Dewey, giving all of Illinois' 28 electoral votes to Mr. Truman. Connecticut's eight electoral votes went to Mr. Dewey on a margin of less than 16,000 popular votes. In both instances, of course, the fair and sensible arrangement would have been to distribute the electoral vote in the same proportion that the popular vote was divided. If this had been done on a national scale, the result would have been not 303 to 189, but 261.2 for Mr. Truman to 222.5 for Mr. Dewey.

Senator Lodge's proposed amendment to the Constitution for the effectuation of this reform has many points in its favor. It would close up the loopholes in our electoral system. It would extend the presidential contest over the entire country and minimize the influence of minority groups in a few pivotal States. Beyond this, it would relieve the country of the illusion that a relatively close election has been a landslide. We doubt that landslide psychology is good for a democracy, which needs stability as well as ferment. Much energy may be lost in violent swings of the pendulum.

If the public is led to believe that the swing to the left in the recent election was sharper than it really was, business may be discouraged and curtail its activities. Some labor leaders are already presenting unreasonable demands on the strength of what they believe to have been a landslide in their favor. Legislators and organs of public opinion may be deceived largely because of the exaggeration that creeps into the distribution of electoral votes. We cannot help thinking that a more equitable distribution of electoral votes would give both the victors and the vanquished a better understanding of what their responsibilities and opportunities are.

Tool Of Obstruction

Senator Vandenberg comes along with a reminder that mere amendment of the Senate cloture rule would be no guarantee against unlimited talkfests. Cloture is a means of limiting debate on any bill before the Senate when and if two thirds of the Senators agree that a filibuster has gone far enough. But, the Michigander points out, there is no means of arresting an endless stream of chatter designed to prevent a bill from being taken up.

"In the final analysis," Mr. Vandenberg told his colleagues last August, "the Senate has no effective cloture rule at all . . . a very few Senators have it in their power to prevent Senate action on anything . . . the existing Senate rules leave the Senate, rightly or wrongly, at the mercy of unlimited debate ad infinitum." No one has to think twice about the current international situation to see the grave danger of having our policy determined in a negative manner by a hung jury.

We suspect that Senator Vandenberg's diagnosis will be widely applauded, but the applauders may be expected to look askance at his proposed remedy. What he suggests is a change in the Senate rules which would enable that body to force an immediate vote on national emergency legislation at any time by a 90 per cent vote. Why 90 per cent? A rule of this sort would seem to admit that 11 per cent of the Senate would be justified in thwarting the national will in time of emergency. It is true that the Senator is suggesting a drastic rule under which a measure could be brought up for immediate vote. But the good sense of the Senate would prevent action without debate, except perhaps in a moment of national catastrophe.

Surely no more than a two-thirds vote on motions of this sort should be required, and we doubt that there would be any abuse if a majority could at any time halt the talking and require a vote on the issue at stake. If the Senate should fear to go that far, it could approve a cut-off on debate of any kind after a specified number of hours. It could require that the debate be germane to the subject, enforce the rules against frequent quorum calls and other dilatory tactics, and resort to prolonged or continuous sessions. What has been lacking in the past has been the will to self-discipline in the Senate. If such a will now exists, it certainly ought to carry the Senate beyond the 90 per cent rule suggested by Senator Vandenberg.

Shoppers In Wonderland

By Malvina Lindsay

Tax And Price Enigmas

THE OUTLOOK is baffling, to say the least, to the consumer trying to squeeze the last cent's worth out of a dollar. Will excises on handbags, luggage, cosmetics, jewelry, furs, be lifted or reduced by the Eighty-first Congress? Will shoe, textile and stocking prices ever break under the force of full production? When will the effect of those long-promised declines in food prices be felt at the corner grocery?

The prospect for repeal of the luxury tolls isn't bright. Recently the House Speaker of the Eightieth Congress, Joseph W. Martin, predicted there would be "more instead of less taxes," since the national outlook was for spending more money. He said excise tax revision didn't look promising. This especially chilled hopes of the New England jewelry industry, which had at least looked for a renewal of the fight to have Congress repeal the 20 per cent tax on items costing up to $25.

The fur industry will renew its compaign against excise taxes when the new Congress meets. It blames these excises chiefly for the doldrums the fur business has been going through, which have forced some price cuts, and according to manufacturers, cut their revenue and attendant Federal taxes enormously.

STRONGEST fight probably will be made in behalf of handbags. Some women's and labor groups are aroused about this tax and may back the leather men in their appeal to Congress. The argument there is that a handbag is a necessity, not a luxury, and that the tax works a hardship on low-income consumers. More than half of the handbags sold are priced around $5—and these carry a $1 tax. It it likely that at least a reduction of the tax from 20 to 10 per cent may be obtained.

However, the fur dealers also maintain their goods are a necessity to give warmth. They point out that three fourths of their coats retail at less than $400. And the necessity argument is likewise used by the toilet goods, jewelry and other industries whose products (about 50 in all) carry excise taxes. Hence readjustments in some of these may be expected—but no repeal.

Price resistance has been growing to most of the products bearing these taxes, especially furs, leather goods and jewelry. Some tax authorities think there should be a general revision of excises, but they also hold that the base of excise taxes might well be broadened to include other articles not classed as necessities. They say that excises should and will be regarded as a permanent part of the Federal tax system.

It looks as though consumers must accept the fact that they will have to bear the brunt of taxes, direct and otherwise, for a long time to come. For a country can't go through two major wars and a long depression in one generation without having a day of reckoning. Recently, Nugent Fallon, president of the Federal Home Loan Board of New York, warned that because of national obligations, present and future, "all signs point toward a somewhat reduced standard of living, voluntary or otherwise."

WHAT REALLY puzzles many consumers, at this time, however, is what has become of the good old law of supply and demand. They remember the many promises that full production would take care of high prices. Yet they learn of the shoe and textile industries laying off large numbers of workers because production has caught up with supply. They read of stores becoming overstocked with stockings, of jewelry sales being down, of leather goods reaching high inventory. Yet as sales lag, output is reduced—not prices.

To this, manufacturers reply that labor and materials make their production costs so high they can't cut prices. They say in effect the poorhouse is looming before them. And the consumer gasping at the prices she hears quoted—on wearing apparel especially—wonders when if ever price competition will return.

Baffling the shopper further is the prediction of economists that though lowered farm prices will eventually show up in retail food stores, prices of other products that will be in short supply, partly owing to reconstruction demands abroad, will take up this slack in the cost of living. Apparently there is no road leading back to the shopping of yesterday, to bargain sales, price competition, untaxed merchandise. Apparently the persons with shopping bags are going to continue to pay for humanity's mistakes of yesterday and for today's big gamble on peace, which holds the only hope of easier shopping days tomorrow.

Royal Baby

Let those who criticize the publicity surrounding the birth of the royal baby ask themselves the real reason for their sourness. Let them ask themselves whether they are not dominated by their ancient grudges and prejudices, to the point that anything British irritates them, and any British action or inaction receives their condemnation.

Whose business is it but that of the British people themselves to decide whether or not "millions are wasted on the royal family?" Instead of being thankful for anything which so successfully brings unity and stability in a disunited and unstable world, some people still seem to have the fallacious idea that somehow the American taxpayer is involved in the expense.

HERBERT J. HOLLAND.
Silver Spring, Md.

Regarding the gifts to little Elisabeth Philp, don't you think it is ridiculous to send this family a crib worth $1000 and two chests of $500 each?

I am sure that Mr. and Mrs. Philp will be just as happy with a $75 crib and one chest of $75, maybe even $100. I am sure little Elisabeth will sleep just as comfortably.

If those who wish to send presents to British babies are really urged by charitable feelings rather than by a search for publicity, I suggest that the remaining funds be used to give cribs and chests to a few other poor families in England which had babies the same day as Princess Elizabeth.

"The Chauvinist"

Your strongly worded editorial of November 19 on De Gaulle, in which you label him "a chauvinist who appears to have undone 18 months of patient effort to assure the political stabilization and economic recovery of Europe," is both one-sided and bad tempered.

As long as the Meuse is a lesser military obstacle to land invasion from the east than the English Channel and the Atlantic Ocean, the French will continue to balk at measures that they consider compromise their national security. To do less would be irresponsible on their part. Nor are we in a strong moral position to try to ram such measures down their throats when it is they, not we, who would suffer most if our calculations are unsound.

De Gaulle is not offering a "haughty, arbitrary, dictatorial . . . ultimatum," judging by your own news article of the 18th. He is saying soberly that he feels that the return of the Ruhr plants to German ownership and the present organization of the Western military alliance are steps that might in the long run leave France exposed and helpless before military aggression. He adds that should French opposition to these measures mean that the United States withdraw Marshall Plan aid, he feels that it is the lesser of two evils to do without that aid. It appears that it is we, not he, who are pressing the ultimatum.

Before condemning De Gaulle as a haughty chauvinist because he does not want France to knuckle under to every plan we may back, you might do well to review some of his political predictions since the war. You will find a remarkably high incidence of foresight, one that has not been paralleled by any public figure in this country or England with the possible exception of Churchill. Such a study will, I am sure, be sobering enough for you see De Gaulle in his true light; a stiff and undiplomatic man, no doubt, but also one with a very penetrating and far-reaching appreciation of postwar political currents who has had the courage to express himself even when his opinions might be unpopular with his own countrymen or his country's allies.

SCOTT F. RUNKLE.

Israeli Intransigeance

The November 13 letter of L. H. Hammer on "Sanctions in Israel" is especially deplorable as the dependence of the Zionists on the United States for financial support makes them amenable to American public opinion. They will have to submit if we all back up Mr. Bunche in his efforts.

It is indeed the only possible policy, in the situation that the Jews have themselves created, by smuggling in so many new weapons during the truce. The Arabs are not fools; they knew the boundless ambition, the financial strength, and the ruthlessness, of the American Zionists and they agreed to the truce only on the positive assurance that "neither side would profit from it." It was openly broken, almost at once, by the notorious landing of 800 Irgun recruits under the very eyes of the United Nations observers. Count Bernadotte solved the problem thus created by ordering that the truce must last so that the Jews would not profit from their new illegal strength.

We now see that the Jews are using an illegally acquired air force; they even have tanks. If they are allowed to use their new weapons the United Nations is a farce. VERITAS.

Peoples' Decision

The November 16 letter from William Esslinger quoted Toynbee's famous prediction of some form of world government, arrived at voluntarily, or imposed by force by whatever nation emerged as ascendent after a third world war. Mr. Esslinger suggested that since the subject of world government is vitally important, the Government appropriate funds for education in the matter.

As a strong advocate of world federation and an active member of United World Federalists, may I say that this seems an untenable suggestion. The Government is only the method of implementing the will of the people. It should not tell the people what their will should be. This matter of making enforcible law at the world level is something that the American public must discover and come to accept for themselves and then commit their Government to.

What troubles me is that, in Washington, obviously, the No. 1 target for aggressive attack in the atomic long-range bomber war of tomorrow, the groups seeking to educate the citizen to the implications of "security in the air age," and the possibilities of implementing enforcible law at the world level must struggle on a pittance provided by a handful of individuals.

Kremlin's Line

No democratic American likes the reactionary governments of China, Greece and Spain. But must we withhold all support to these governments who are holding the dikes against communism until some uncertain day when democratic forces take over? Isn't this the Kremlin's own line? CHARLES DORSEY.

Controlling China Aid

Judging from your editorial of November 8 and Herblock's cartoon of the 17th on the subject of China, there would seem to be adequate foundation for the persistent reports that the Nationalist government of China has not profited from our advice and continues the age old practice of squeeze, which results in the soldiery being ill fed and rarely paid while the big shots line their pockets. We must conclude, therefore, that the many millions in cash and war materials which have been poured into China by the United States have been allowed to go down the drain because of our fear of infringing China's national sovereignty.

We must attach a very high value to the American legal meaning of sovereignty to have contributed so lavishly toward the continuation of operation rathole. Yet we flatter ourselves on being intelligent and matter-of-fact.

Opposed to the Nationalist forces we find a disciplined and, according to their standards, an adequately fed army fighting under the Communist banner. One deterrent to graft among the Communists is their prompt use of the firing squad. However they may treat the peasantry, they feed their soldiers and give them a personal objective to fight for.

The recently published demand of a Greek politician that America should furnish the Greek government with whatever they desire and then keep hands off appears to have been the line followed, to some extent at least, in giving aid to China. Are we farsighted or are we stupid?

Why not have a Chinese-American Ordnance Board, as suggested in your editorial?

U. GRANT-SMITH.
Washington.

If the Chinese Communists are successful in gaining control of the government in China, I would like to see the United States do everything possible to help it to be the best government China has ever had. The Communist armies in China represent a Chinese peasant and worker rebellion that has been going on for over 20 years. The movement has anti-feudalism and anti-imperialism as its war cries. It is a rebellion by the little people of China against authority which has aimed to keep them subservient.

Unity and peace in China have been our aims. Only on this basis can the orderly development of democratic institutions take place. Once this has been achieved, the first problem demanding attention is that of food. Primary problems also include simplifying language, and finding capital to increase productivity.

The United States has it in its power to push a Communist China into a position where dependency on Russia will create the very condition we most fear. We also have it in our power to help a Communist government in China to carry out its own program in its own way, and thus remain free to take an independent course in world affairs. This would mean adapting our thought to envisage assisting China develop a way of life which will differ radically from our own. It will be a way of life which in many respects will resemble that of Soviet Russia. But anyone who will take the trouble to read the Communists' program as presented in Mao Tse-tung's The New Democracy, will see that the Chinese program departs from Moscow orthodoxy even more radically than does Tito's program in Yugoslavia, which has brought Cominform recrimination.

"Church And State"

Apropos the current controversy the teaching of religion as a part of the public school program, how far The Washington Post and present day jurists have digressed from the thinking of legislative leaders on this subject at the time the then proposed Constitution was being drafted, can be seen by reference to the first sentence of Article III of the Ordinance of 1787: The Northwest Territorial Government, which reads:

"Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged." H. S. HARRISON.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

No Policy For China

EACH DAY both in the State Department and in the Economic Cooperation Administration telephone calls are put through to Nanking and Shanghai in tottering Nationalist China.

Childs

Each day the news seems to be worse, even though temporary victories may conceal for a time the true condition. It is not hard to imagine the sensation of the official at the Washington end of the line hearing the voice coming from so far with its message of imminent disaster.

The cry for help and more help echoes in the vacuum of American failure.

No matter what is done about China in the weeks to come, the failure of United States policy is a glaring and inescapable fact. Rather, the failure is in having no policy at all.

Those who have argued the urgent necessity for a constructive, positive policy not only in China but in all of Asia, now have the dubious satisfaction of saying, "I told you so." The fault does not lie with Secretary of State Marshall alone, nor can it be placed entirely on that convenient whipping boy, the State Department, although the department has much to answer for.

The failure gets down to more basic things—to public opinion, to a lack of understanding, to confusion both in Government and the public mind. Having had the help of a constructive critic who knows China well, I should like to suggest some of the fundamental mistakes.

WHEN Marshall returned from his mission to China, shortly before he became Secretary of State, he recommended a sort of compromise government with the "moderate" Communists such as Gen. Chou Enlai, brought in. This was an unworkable proposal and it served chiefly to confirm the attitude of a great many Americans who tend to regard Chiang Kai-shek as a stubborn old reactionary who could make over China with nice, liberal reforms if only he would.

The attitude on this wave band of public opinion tends toward the sentimental. China is "the good earth" with missionary overtones.

At the other extreme are the passionate partisans of Chiang, including important politicians and publishers. Some, such as Representative Walter Judd of Minnesota, are sincerely devoted to the Generalissimo as the only hope.

Others have had the charm treatment in the course of VIP junkets to China and have tied their conspicuous and demanding egos to the fate of Chiang and Mme. Chiang. Some have a direct monetary interest in bolstering the Chiang regime, and still others, like William C. Bullit, who has gone on a sort of lame-duck mission to China for the Republicans, seem chiefly interested in making political capital out of past mistakes.

BETWEEN these two poles the vacuum of official policy has existed. It has not been entirely a vacuum. There have been those on lower levels who have urged a course between the two extremes.

They have recognized the weaknesses of the Chiang government which have made it far too frail a reed to place all-American dependence upon. At the same time, they have had no illusions about the Communists being merely goodhearted reformers bent on breaking the ancient grip of the landlords.

Therefore, they have argued the critical need to find and work directly with other non-Communist leaders in Nationalist China. They were urging, for example, direct intervention to strengthen Fu Tso-Yi, the able commander for Chiang in North China.

First, they argued that American aid should be concentrated in one or two strategic areas, preferably in North China. Chiang should be told that the United States intended to see to it that aid was sent directly to Fu Tso-Yi. By this kind of concentration, the graft and corruption that have demoralized the Nationalist armies should be kept down.

Even a hint that this might be done caused screams of outrage from the partisans of Chiang. Why, this was proposing to undermine our wartime ally. As though Chiang had not already done enough to undermine himself.

So nothing, or virtually nothing, has been done. If there is a plan for China at this eleventh hour, I have been able to find no trace of it. Surely, this should have been an appropriate project for the policy-planning staff and its chief, George Kennan, which were introduced into the State Department with so much hopeful publicity. It now is very late to plan for China.

But planning and a constructive approach are desperately needed for southwest Asia which would quickly come under the influence of a Communist China. If we merely let events drift along, we are likely to see that whole teeming area, with its rich resources, come under the absolute sway of communism. The warning bell in China can be heard all the way around the world.

Marshall Will Hold Press Conference Today

The State Department announced yesterday that Secretary Marshall will hold a news conference at 3:30 p. m. (EST) today.

Marshall returned from the Paris United Nations meeting Monday to report to President Truman on foreign relations. He conferred with Mr. Truman for an hour. No reports were given out on any decisions reached, or whether Marshall would remain in the Cabinet much longer.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

The Kremlin Pays The Bill

EVERY reasonably well-informed person knows that the Soviet Union gives financial support to the world Communist movement. Yet very little has been known of just how this is done. It is this which makes so interesting the specific details of Soviet financial support for the French Communist Party which came to light during the recent French coal strike.

Some of the facts were revealed a few days ago in the French Assembly by the left wing Socialist, Jules Moch, the French Minister of the Interior. Others have become available since. The facts concern the role played by a peculiar financial institution which is known as "the Commercial Bank of Northern Europe."

Ostensibly, this is just a bank like any other bank. In fact, it is the main channel for money given to the French Communist Party by the government of the Soviet Union.

It is organized as a French company, and it occupies respectable quarters in the Rue de l'Arcade, in Paris. However, of its 100,000 shares of capital, 99,700 are owned by two Soviet banks, which means, of course, that the bank is owned by the Soviet government. Its manager is a former Russian citizen, Charles Hilsum, now naturalized, and it has a select board of directors consisting of a Russian, one Ostrovsky, and two French Communists.

THE BANK is capitalized at only 50 million francs, but it has assets in France of 1,000,400,000 francs. Largely through this bank, the Soviet government has made an investment in the French coal strike of upward of $100,000 a day.

Some of this investment was public. The Soviet miners of the Donbas, Kuznets, Ural and Moscow coal basins, for example, made a large "voluntary, popular" contribution—in other words they were taxed a proportion of their wages. The rubles thus collected from the hard-pressed Russian miners were then exchanged into francs by the Soviet government (which ordinarily guards its foreign exchange like an anxious mother) and turned over to the French Communists. The Soviet satellite states obediently followed suit, and the total thus contributed came to a little over $900,000 in the franc equivalent.

This sum is by no means a measure of Moscow's generosity, however. Far larger sums were delivered secretly to the Communist leaders. In certain cases the details were handled directly between Soviet diplomats and the French Communists. More often the French Communists drew on the Commercial Bank of Northern Europe.

These secret transfers were concealed by the Communists by a simple device. The Communists repeatedly announced very large donations to the coal miners from their comrades in other French unions and labor groups. In fact, the French workers were not so free handed. Much the greater part of these "donations" consisted of drawings by the Communist leaders on the Soviet-owned bank.

THE FACT is, of course, that the coal strike was in many ways justified by the desperate economic squeeze on the French miners. But this should not be allowed to obscure the fact that, through the Moscow-controlled bank the Soviet government intervened drastically in the internal affairs of France. The coal strike is now over. But in terms of heavy pressure brought to bear against the French government and the partial wrecking of French recovery, the Soviet investment in the strike no doubt paid off handsomely.

Moreover, similar investments will undoubtedly continue to be made in the future. There is every reason to believe that Soviet financial support for the French Communists will continue, and that the campaign of "rotating" strikes, ordered by the Kremlin for the purpose of bringing French recovery to a halt, will go on.

The pattern of Soviet intervention in the internal affairs of other countries suggested by the facts reported above is not confined, of course, to France. It is interesting, for example, that the Commercial Bank of Northern Europe has had on deposit in the United States upward of 2½ million dollars.

It may be safely assumed that the movement of this money is very carefully watched. But in a free economy such supervision is difficult. And a study of Communist finances made some years ago indicated that outsize profits allowed certain businessmen in their financial dealings with the Soviet government eventually enriched the Communist Party's treasury.

Clearly, this kind of thing is one of the Soviet Union's most useful weapons in the cold war. The only possible American response is to continue the great effort to build a non-Soviet world in which miners will not starve, and the Communist parties of the Continent, now so menacing, will become hardly more than nuisance, as is the Communist Party in the United States. This effort will not succeed overnight. But already in France and western Europe there are signs that it is beginning to succeed.

Tax Chief Avoids Probe Of Textron

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP).—A Senate subcommittee today took up the question of ts legal right to subpena the United States Commissioner of Internal Revenue to appear as a witness and testify on tax returns.

Commissioner George J. Schoeneman did not appear today after a telegraphed demand that he do so by Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.), presiding at a hearing into the affairs of the multi-million dollar Textron Corp.

But late in the day John W. Edwards, division counsel in Boston for the Internal Revenue Bureau, took the stand, and said the bureau's chief counsel had directed him to appear.

Official's Legal Right

Committee Counsel Charles W. Tobey, jr., asked Edwards:

"If a subpena is issued directing the commissioner to come before this committee to testify on tax returns and letters filed with this committee, then the commissioner would have no legal right to refuse?"

Edwards answered:

"I believe he would not."

Edwards added, however, that the tax law bars the commissioner from "divulging information" on tax returns.

Tobey said he wanted to ask the commissioner why there has been an alleged 14-month delay in pressing for 11 years of back taxes reportedly owed by a charitable trust.

McGrath Due Today

McGrath is due to take the witness stand Wednesday.

Today's inquiry into affairs of Textron and its president, Royal Little, brought out that one "prize" business deal came to Little's attention "by accident on an airplane ride."

Lawrence Green, trustee of the Textron Pension Trust, told how the trust purchased for "about $8,500,000" the stock of a pneumatic tool plant in Cleveland, Ohio, last July. Within two months, Green said, the tool company declared dividends totaling "about four million dollars."

Green said Little suggested that deal and when Tobey asked how Little heard of it, Green replied:

"Entirely by accident on an airplane ride. He ran into a man who told him the stock of the company was for sale at an advantageous price."

Tobey Delays Reply

Senator Tobey was asked after the hearing whether the committee will subpena Commissioner Schoeneman.

The Senator replied: "I will have to answer that tomorrow."

He added that any Senate committee or subcommittee has the power to subpena a witness under the LaFollette-Monroney Act of 1946.

McGrath, the Senator added, has requested that the two trustees associated with him be "in the room" for the hearing Wednesday.

The two are Godfrey Simonds and Benjamin R. Sturgis, both of Providence, R. I., and cotrustees in the Rhode Island Charities Trust.

They have testified that the trustees received salaries of $15,000 a year for the past three years.

Will Push Bill

Sen. Ellender Urges Early School Aid

Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.) yesterday called for early action in the new Congress on a 300-million-dollar Federal-aid-to-education bill similar to the Senate-passed measure he cosponsored at the last session.

A pledged point in the President's campaign platform, the bill cleared the Senate with Republican support but died in the House Education and Labor Committee.

Friendly Democrats

The bill still faces possible House coalition trouble, but Democrats friendly to the bill will be in the House committee saddle.

Ellender meanwhile disclosed he has an appointment at the White House today, presumably to confer with the President on aid to education, the long-range housing bill he also sponsored, and other legislation.

Ellender said his bill meets the oft-raised objection of Federal interference by "stating in unmistakable language that the Federal Government cannot interfere with the State management of public schools."

Senator's Goal

He said his goal is to give all 48 States an equal "minimum standard of education." He said the poorer States have made "greater financial sacrifices in appropriations for education than have the richer States, but have been unable to meet minimum requirements because of their disproportionately large number of children."

"I believe," he said, "that democracy can be made and should be made a living, breathing force through higher standards of education in all the States."

Martin Urges Government Payroll Cut

Miami Beach, Fla., Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., of the House of Representatives today called for a cut in the Government payroll to help balance the national budget.

He told the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Southern Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers that the Federal payroll now carries "more than 2,100,000 names" exclusive of military personnel.

He said that in the recent election "in several States the final victory for the Administration was determined by a number of votes considerably smaller than the total of the Federal employes in that State." Then he added:

"The political power of two million payrollees and their families recently has been demonstrated with rather startling effect. The question may well be asked whether the Federal payroll of itself has grown to such dimensions that it is now a self-perpetuating political organism—which holds the power to keep itself in office independently by sheer number of votes."

He said the present national debt of 250 billion dollars was too large, and that the budget must be balanced "even at a sacrifice of some worthwhile spending. It's the price we must pay for stability."

"The budget for this fiscal year is 43 billion dollars," he said, "and if it is increased by 1½ billions the problems of additional revenue arise, and upon the type of new taxes imposed will depend whether we have good times or a disastrous depression."

D. C. Building Permits Level In 10 Months

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington is one of the few cities in the country which fails to show an increase in building permits volume in the first 10 months this year.

A Dun & Bradstreet compilation yesterday revealed that District of Columbia construction plans in the 10 months ended October 30 totaled $42,465,453, compared with $42,937,308 in the same 1947 period. Nationally, permits in 215 cities displayed an increase of 34.6 per cent for the period, reaching an all-time high of $3,349,221,834.

Reason for the dip here apparently is because the Dun & Bradstreet study does not include the permits in the nearby Maryland and Virginia areas where Washington builders are concentrating the bulk of new construction.

Local permits in October totaled $5,062,621, against $5,270,791 in the same 1947 month. For the 215 cities. Ostober permits aggregated $304,183,448, off 6.7 per cent from a year ago, the research agency reported.

The leading 25 cities in permit valuations for the first 10 months this year follow:

Business Treats Stockholder As Modern Forgotten Man

By J. A. Livingston

HERE'S A TEST. But unless you're "up" on economics, the odds are against your getting the right answer. Pick the wrong word from this Associated Press statement: "Not since the lush days of 1929-30 have such generous dividends been paid on capital stock as a reflection of high earnings." Would you like a hint? It's an adjective. And when you're ready for the answer, see the next paragraph.

Livingston

The incorrect word is "generous." "Stingy" would come closer to fitting the facts. True, dividends have been climbing. According to data compiled by Moody's Investors Service, dividend payments of 125 major industrial corporations averaged $2.97 a share in October. That exceeds the 1929 rate of $2.47 a share. But dividends are only half the story.

Earnings are the other half, and they are up far more sharply than dividends. In the third quarter of this year, for example, earnings of these 125 companies ran at an annual rate of $7.15 a share. Thus directors were paying out to stockholders 42 cents on every dollar earned. They kept for general corporate purposes 58 cents. In 1929, the reverse was true. Corporations paid out 61 cents on the dollar, retained 39 cents. Two obvious reasons for this reversal are:

1. Today many companies are engaged in large-scale plant expansion programs. They need money. So they hold on to stockholders' money.

2. Many corporation officials are wary of present high earnings. So they want to hold on to cash to see them through a possible economic storm. At the same time, they don't want to raise dividends to a rate they may not be able to maintain.

THE STOCKHOLDER is a forgotten man for another reason: He's not as important, economically, as he used to be. Back in 1928 and 1929, when corporation directors wanted to raise money, they thought first of their shareholders. They'd offer rights to additional shares. Stockholders would eagerly buy. So the stockholder—the market—was a constant source of new money to business. Therefore, corporation officials rewarded stockholders with regular and satisfying dividends. The stockholder had a real, live function.

That's not the case today. Earnings sell too cheaply in the open market. The average price of Moody's 125 industrials was $50 a share at the end of October, or only seven times annual earnings of $7.15 a share. To sell new common stock, a corporation would—in effect—have to offer $14 of earnings for each $100. In 1929, the comparable figure was $6. So as a source of new money, the modern stockholder is a comparative luxury. To the corporation, he's no longer the indispensable man.

THE ECONOMIC decline of the stockholder is visible in the following table. It shows the increase in the amount of earnings corporations have to offer in order to sell $100 worth of common stock in the open market. Also it shows the declining proportion of earnings paid out in dividends. Admittedly, the 1948 total may be boosted by year-end extras and specials, but not sufficient, certainly, to radically change the trend.

Year	Earnings per $100 of Mkt. Value	% of Earnings Paid out in Dividends
1937	6.80	68
1938	4.38	86
1939	6.35	60
1940	8.16	64
1941	10.27	61
1942	9.18	69
1943	7.02	65
1944	7.46	61
1945	6.19	64
1946	7.08	52
1947	11.54	44

*October.

UTILITY directors have not treated shareholders so cavalierly as directors of industrial companies. They still depend on common stockholders. American Telephone & Telegraph is an outstanding example of a company which periodically issues rights to stockholders to put up more money. So it holds on to its $9 a share dividend as a matter of corporate survival. Currently, utilities are paying out 86 per cent of their earnings in dividends as against 42 per cent for industrial companies.

The attitude of directors of industrial companies toward stockholders could change. Suppose the stock market advanced steadily. Then once again corporation directors would look favorably on the stock market as a means of raising money. They'd not have to offer so much in earnings (cash) to stockholders as dividends. They'd feel sure they could get the money back. But until then, corporate officials are apt to be conservative rather than generous with dividends—as a matter of self-protection.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 23 (AP).—Early gains in grain futures were lost late in the session at the Board of Trade today. The opening advance attracted profit cashing, and later news of an embargo at Galveston, Tex., in addition to those at Houston and New Orleans, brought scattered liquidation in wheat.

Corn was in demand early, but reacted with wheat, when traders were advised that the longshoremans strike at North Atlantic ports had bought a glut of grain to gulf ports.

At the close wheat was ⅛ to ⅞ lower than the previous close, corn was ⅛ higher to ⅜ lower, oats were unchanged to 1 cent lower, rye was 1 cent to 1⅛ lower, and lard was off 3 to 15 cents a hundredweight.

Supreme Court Asked to Rule on Alabama Electors

Three Alabama voters asked the Supreme Court yesterday to order the presidential electors of that State to cast their votes for President Truman.

The 11 winning electors are pledged to support Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, the States' Rights candidate. There were no Truman electors on the ballot.

The injunction was asked by George G. Adcock, E. Z. Yeager, and Gus Gulas, through their attorneys, Thurman Arnold of Washington, Jerome Phillips of Birmingham, and State Senator Broughton Lamberth of Alexander City, Ala.

Federal Judge C. B. Kennamer last Wednesday refused to enjoin the electors from voting for anyone except President Truman, as he had been asked to do by Alabama Gov. James Folsom.

Earlier the Alabama Supreme Court had refused to order the votes cast for Mr. Truman.

House Probers Hit by Oxnam

N. J.) is under indictment for activities allegedly Unamerican and criminal, has now presumed to speak in the field of religion," the bishop said.

"It would appear from the press reports that the committee has been more interested in a futile attempt to discredit 'the word 'Protestant' than to ascertain the truth relative to forces that would undermine our national life."

Bishop Oxnam said that the Methodist church proposed to resist every form of dictatorship, "whether it comes from the left of Communism or the right of Fascism."

He charged that it was "singularly strange that the Committee on Un-American Activities should have been silent concerning the Fascist threat to our freedom."

"It would be illuminating to know how many priests were allied with Fascist groups in enemy countries, how many concordats were signed with such lands, why Franco was called a 'son of the church,' why at the moment there is such insistent demand that we recognize the Spanish dictator," he said.

"What is back of these libelous attempts to discredit Protestantism? Reactionary forces know that Protestantism is demanding social justice and racial brotherhood. Some of these forces who are primarily interested in keeping their own special privileges rather than establishing justice, seek to block reasonable reform by attacking those who would establish righteousness."

Nonexistant League 'Probed'

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP).—A Methodist editor declared today that the House Un-American Activities Committee listed a nonexistent organization yesterday when it called the Epworth League a target of Communist activity.

The Rev. Emory Stevens Bucke, editor of Zion's Herald, made public an editorial to appear in the Methodist weekly's December 1 edition in which he declares:

"This shows some amazing techniques in investigation and ought to give most people a rather clear indication of how sure of facts this legal smear committee really is.

"We need not remind Methodists that for nearly 10 years there has been no Epworth League.

"The Methodist Youth Fellowship became our new youth organization when we united the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Methodist Protestant Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1939 . . .

"Surely if the House Committee on Un-American Activities meant that the Methodist Youth Fellowship was a place where 'Communists dig in,' they would have run into the name of the organization some place.

"It seems clear that the committee contented itself with no investigation but satisfied itself with gossip and not facts."

YALE DEPT.—Yale lost the Harvard game, worst thing that could happen to a Yale team, but the Elis wound up their football season with a smashing victory over that 12-month foe, Race Prejudice. The election of Levi Jackson, great Negro halfback, to the captaincy of the 1949 team by Yale's lettermen threw the forces of race hate for a record loss.

POVICH

The elevation of the colored, boy, Jackson, to the much prized captaincy was at once a new departure in Yale football history and in the best traditions of the old school tie. You could say, with a bit of license, that Jackson's father was an old Yale man—albeit a colored waiter in the Yale Club at New Haven for 30 years.

Yale's new captain is a former GI, who is majoring in sociology, psychology and economics. For three years he has been the best back on the Yale team, a twin threat at carrying the ball and passing it. In the Harvard-Yale game three years ago I saw him, as safety man, fumble the first punt he tried to handle and it was a horrible muff. On the next punt he went back for a one-hand catch that was worthy of Tris Speaker and didn't fumble. It was a gutty exhibition for all to see. In the vote at Yale the other day, race hate lost another election, this time unanimously.

BOWL DEPT.— For football fans generally, it's only a mild case of Rose Fever again this year, with the Sugar Bowl again promising to surpass the Rose Bowl. There is no guarantee that the Pacific Coast will be represented by its best football team despite the selection of unbeaten California, and in Northwestern, the Pasadena people are settling for the second best team in the Big Nine. Without Michigan, the Rose Bowl will prove little.

Indications are that the Sugar Bowl selection will pit unbeaten, once-tied North Carolina against Oklahoma. That's the more attractive game despite Oklahoma's early-season defeat by Santa Clara. Since then the Oklahoma team has been one of the top scoring outfits of the Nation, and more spectacular than either California or Northwestern.

The Sugar Bowl people won't make their definite choice until after Saturday's Georgia-Georgia Tech clash, but they will fluff their big game if they don't invite Carolina and Oklahoma. If Carolina is chosen, the Sugar Bowl can always boast that it will house the Nation's best college back, the same being Charley Justice.

BASKET BALL DEPT.—The Washington Caps, who have won ten in a row and are the best show in town, apparently have hit the winning formula: Avoid like the plague the business of getting any player into the list of the league's high scorers. They don't have a man among the top ten scorers, yet they haven't lost a game.

Coach Red Auerbach of the Caps takes a sensible view of it all. "We're satisfied to split the scoring up among our guys and none of 'em are targets," he says. "If you stop one man or two, you don't stop the Caps."

And the high scorers like George Mikan of Minneapolis who has been averaging 28 points a game, and Joe Fulks of Philadelphia who has been dropping 19 points per game, don't faze Auerbach, either. "We've played the Philadelphia club with Fulks 13 times now and beaten 'em 10 times in two years. Nobody's going to stop him, so we concentrate on stopping his pals on the Warriors. Fulks can't out-score a whole ball team like the Caps."

HACK WILSON—The passing of Hack Wilson at the age of 48 closes out a baseball chapter that was legend even during his lifetime. For the draft price of $7500, the Giants let go to the Cubs the roly-poly slugger who went on to hit more home runs, 56, than any other player in National League history.

The game was a frolic to the fun-loving Wilson who, in shape was the league's most feared slugger and on other days was sitting it out on the bench under managerial restraint. He was built on the lines of a beer keg and not unfamiliar with its contents.

Joe Judge, with the Dodgers in the sunset of his own baseball career, relates the day Wilson was summoned as a pinch hitter and was nowhere to be found on the bench. Judge was dispatched to hunt him out in the dressing room and found Wilson swigging beer, surrounded by empty bottles strewed in front if his locker.

"They want you," said Judge. "Two out in the ninth and we got two on. They want you to hit." Wilson dragged himself up the stairs to the playing field. Judge hastily set to work to clear away evidence of the beer before the game could end and a wrathful manager viewed the tell-tale scene.

"I was caught in the act," relates Judge. "They came trooping in, with the game over. I was scared for Hack but everybody else was happy. The game was over all right. Wilson had just hit one out of the park."

Central Takes Title, Beats Western, 14-6

Gene Million, Gleason Tally For Vikings

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Central's Vikings tacked up their first Interhigh Football Championship in six years yesterday with a hard-won, 14-6, victory over Western's Red Raiders before 2500 spectators at Central Stadium.

The stubborn, undermanned Raiders slowed to a walk the last leg of Central's runaway to the title, by out-charging, out-tackling and out-statisticking he Vikings. But Western couldn't gain inside Central's 25.

FINAL INTERHIGH STANDINGS

	W.	L.	Pct.		W.	L.	Pct.
Central	7	0	1.000	Western	3	4	.429
Eastern	5	2	.714	Coolidge	2	5	.286
Anacostia	5	2	.714	Roosevelt	1	6	.143
McKinley	5	2	.714	Wilson	0	7	.000

The hustling Vikings struck their two telling blows on the alertness of Center Gene Million, who ran 60 yards for a touchdown with an intercepted pass, and the clever quarterbacking of Jimmy Pantos, who manuevered a 45-yard scoring drive in the fourth quarter.

25th Title in 60 Years

This seventh victory enabled Central to finish its league slate without a loss and gave the Vikings their twenty-fifth grid championship since the league began 60 years ago.

However, little Dale Summerbell, fancy quarterback, and Dick Casey, powerful plunging fullback, gave Central a mighty scare by rolling all over the field to a 15-5 advantage in first downs and a 187-102-yard edge over the Vikings in ground gaining.

Western, four-time league loser, was playing without its two leading ground-gainers, Dale Larsen and Wade Hubbard, both on the injured list, Tackles Stan Tinkham and Lennie Fay turned in outstanding games for Western while Tackle Fotis Karousatos was top man in Central's line.

Western racked up eight first downs to none for Central when the Vikings struck suddenly to score a minute before halftime.

With Casey and Summerbell pounding the Central line, Western had pushed 49 yards to the Viking 25. Then, on fourth down, Summerbell faded 'way back, and tried a dangerous screen pass.

Million made a perfect interception and raced diagonally to his left. Only two men had a chance to catch him. Karousatos blocked out Summerbell and Million outsprinted the other to score on a 60-yard run. Pete Chaconas converted.

Western hung on grimly in the third quarter, and then Central's Terry Gregory intercepted a Summerbell pass on the Western 45 to set up the second Viking touchdown. Running through guard, Jack Wert ripped off 25 yards.

Pantos and Wert, on five cracks at the line, moved to the one, where a backfield-in-motion penalty moved the Vikings five yards. With an eight-man Western line confronting him, Pantos caught the Raiders with a surprise flat pass to Franny Gleason for the touchdown. Chaconas again converted.

Plucky Western, on a sustained march of 64 yards, scored their only touchdown in the closing moments with Casey plunging over center from the one foot line.

Victims of the vicious tackling and blocking were Tackle Bill Weaver and End Bill Dunker, both of Central. Both were carried off the field and taken to Garfield Hospital for overnight observation. Weaver, with a slight hear concussion, and Dunker, with a slight contusion of grain muscles, were both in satisfactory condition.

He Now Has 22 For Nine Racing Days

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 23.—Clarence Picou, sensational apprentice, broke out in another rash of winners here today.

The Texas saddle kid rode to five victories in eight tries and ran his string of successes to 22 for nine days. Just to prove he is human, Picou finished a beaten off last on one occasion.

The 17-year-old youth added another feature race victory to his slate in the Crisfield Purse. He climbed into the saddle of Brookmeade Stable's Inheritance and kept the 3-year-old filly going long enough to get home a length and a quarter in advance of a photo for second in which Alan T. Clark's Fritz Maisel took a nose nod over E. L. Miller's Let 'Em Wander.

$5.20 Mutuel

A crowd of 8000 installed the Picou-Brookmeade miss, a daughter of War Admiral, as the favorite and her backers collected $5.20 for each $2 investment.

Inheritance performed over a muddy track and turned in the excellent (under the conditions) time of 1:13 for 6 furlongs.

The race was delayed for almost 10 minutes by a rodeo staged by R. L. Hall jr's., Tacaro Briar. This 5-year-old broke through the gate, tossed Apprentice George Pappas, jumped the infield fence twice, eluded two outriders and finally ran out of steam. The stewards scratched him and ordered all bets refunded.

Picou always had some kind of a lead with Inheritance. Meetmenow ran almost abreast of the choice to the stretch and then weakened. Fritz Maisel, shuffled back in the opening furlong, came to the outside and Let 'Em Wander, never far back, came to the inside.

In the final drive, however, Picou found some hidden punch in his mount and kept her going. Both Fritz Maisel and Let 'em Wander closed gamely but not soon enough.

Wins Opener

Picou opened the program with a victory. Once again it was a Brookmeade horse—Whirl Along, a 2-year-old son of Whirlaway. He booted the youngster into the wire at a $6.40 mutuel. He was out of the money in the second with Mrs. J. R. Hatfield's Glacial Run. The winner was Harry Susini's Markability, a $24.20 shot which put the finishing touches on a $133.80 daily double pay-off.

In the third race, Picou won with the greatest of ease. He piloted R. R. Dickman's Split The Wind, everybody's best bet. The 6-year-old galloped along in front almost all the way, winning by six lengths. His legion of backers collected a mere $2.80 win mutuel.

Picou tried, but couldn't get speed out of A. S. Hammond's Count Display in the fourth race, the colt finishing back in the rut, but the fifth race was a different story. He went on the track with the Phantom Farm's Flame of India. This mare was last entering the backstretch, but Picou put on a brilliant ride and got the daughter of Flares Up in the final jump at $13.40.

After the feature, Picou rode the Flamingo Farm's Big Elm. This 3-year-old showed nothing that faintly resembled speed and trailed after the opening quarter.

Picou's fifth winner came when he substituted for Apprentice Benny Civitello in the eighth race. He won with H. Dickman's Waterclock, at $7.60.

Rocky Called Unfit to Fight, Bout Is Off

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Rocky Graziano, the former middleweight champion, is in a "mental and emotional state that precludes his fighting at this time," his manager, Irving Cohen, declared tonight.

Graziano was scheduled to fight Fred Apostoli, also a former champion, in Oakland, Calif., December 1. The bout was called off today by Promoter Jimmy Murray.

Rocky vanished from Oakland last week and turned up at his home in Brooklyn. He promised to return, then changed his mind.

"Rocky is as ill-equipped to fight today as he would be if he were suffering from some physical ailment," Cohen told a press conference. "Unfortunately his difficulty is not one that might be discovered by the California Athletic Commission or by any other commission. Nevertheless, it remains that he is in no condition to enter a ring."

In Oakland, Murray said he had spent $9000 on the fight and that about $60,000 in tickets had been sold. Cohen said he hoped to work out some agreement with Murray on the expenses.

Abe Greene, commissioner of the NBA, said "I am generally sorry for Graziano. He needs a psychiatrist. I don't think it's a willful violation of the contract. I think it's an inner conflict resulting from all his problems.

Graziano, appearing unshaved and with his hair uncombed at the press conference called by Cohen, said he was going away to "a quiet place" for two months. He said he had lost the desire—the feeling—to fight.

"I'm boxing in the gym in California," said Rocky, trying to explain his actions,

"I'm boxing a couple of salamis out there and I just stick out my face and take punches."

"Out there they ask me questions. 'What's this about the bribe? What's this about the Army?' They're driving me crazy.

"There's nothing wrong with me a little happiness wouldn't fix up."

Rocky translated "a little happiness" to mean recovery of his license to box in New York State. His license was revoked by the New York State Athletic Commission in 1947 because he failed to report an alleged bribe attempt.

Murray announced he had retained Jerry Geisler, noted Los Angeles attorney, to file suit against the former middleweight champion for $50,000, charging breach of contract.

Hack Wilson, Ex-National League Homer King, Dies

HACK WILSON
Dies in Baltimore . . .

By Max Fullerton

Baltimore, Nov. 23 (AP).—Lewis (Hack) Wilson, baseball's onetime roly-poly "Bad Boy" whose name got on top of the batting records and stayed there, died today.

At the age of 48, just 18 years after completing the biggest year of any National League home run slugger, he succumbed in city hospital.

His last illness was diagnosed as internal hemorrhages complicated by a condition similar to pneumonia.

In 1930, with the Chicago Cubs, Wilson hit 56 home runs. No National League hitter has ever equaled that number. He even outslugged Babe Ruth of the Yankees that year.

In the same great season, Hack batted in 190 runs and that figure still stands as tops for the major leagues. It beat the 175 batted in by Lou Gehrig of the Yankees in 1927.

Hack's life in the major leagues covered exactly 10 years and it had plenty of color. He was in and out

Hack Was Series Goat

Baltimore, Nov. 23 (AP).—Life never was too smooth for Hack Wilson. Wilson was the goat of the 1929 World Series against the Philadelphia Athletics.

The pudgy outfielder lost two fly balls in the memorable seventh inning of the fourth game during which the A's scored 10 runs to overcome an 8-0 deficit.

Al Simmons homered to start the last of the seventh. Jimmy Foxx singled and then Wilson lost Bing Miller's fly ball. Three more singles and a fly out followed and then Wilson misjudged a drive by Mule Haas that wound up as a three-run homer.

A walk, singles by Simmons, Foxx, a hit batsman and Jimmy Dykes' double completed the scoreing before Johnny Boley and Jack Burns fanned to end the inning. The A's beat the Cubs, 3-2, the following day to win the series in five games.

Far from discouraged over his showing in the series, Wilson went to town in 1930, setting the National League homer mark of 56 and the major league runs batted in record of 720.

Wilson also figured in a humerous incident in the twilight of his career. Wilson was patrolling the outfield in ancient Baker Bowl in Philadelphia one day. He had been chasing balls all over the field when Brooklyn Manager Casey Stengel called time to lift his pitcher, Walter (Boom Boom) Beck. Beck argued with Stengel that he wanted to stay in. Wilson, meanwhile, was catching his breath and paying no attention to the argument.

Finally, Beck in disgust, whirled around and fired the ball to the outfield. The ball hit the wall with a bang and Wilson, thinking that play had been resumed, charged after it, picked it up and fired it into the infield.

Caps Beat Celtics, 71-68, For 10 in Row

Boston, Nov. 23.—The Washington Capitols scored 31 points in the final period to overtake the Boston Celtics, 71 to 68, at Boston Garden tonight.

After trailing for three quarters, the Caps sliced a 14-point lead down in nine minutes and then went on to win, mainly due to the efforts of Kleggie Hermsen who sank three field goals in the last three minutes of play.

The victory was Washington's tenth in as many starts, and was watched by 6392 spectators, largest crowd ever to watch a professional basketball game in their hockey citadel.

Hermsen's total for the night was 16 points but he was topped by Boston's Eddie Ehlers and Gene Stump who scored 24 and 22 points respectively.

The Caps were led about the Garden in a merry chase by Boston in the first three periods, the Celts holding a 6-point margin at the end of the first period and again at the half. Boston reached its peak in the third period when it scored 21 points before leveling off.

But Red Auerbach's quintet began to roll in the last quarter, on defense as well as offense. They stopped the Celtics from scoring a field goal for the first 10 minutes.

Matt Zunic, former George Washington star, put the Caps back into the ball game by scoring 11 of his 14 points in this quarter. Then Hermsen took over.

Midget Races Off for Good

Tom Lane's indoor midget auto racing plans received a knockout blow late yesterday when the District Board of Health ruled that the competition could not continue under existing conditions at Uline Arena.

No complaints were received from the spectators or contestants, but the board ruled that an unhealthy atmosphere prevails during the races and suggested changes in the ventilating system that would be prohibitive in cost and unnecessary for other types of events sponsored at Uline's. There was nothing left to do but call the whole thing off.

Warriors Lose, 90-80

Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (AP).—The Fort Wayne Pistons rallied in the final five minutes to upset the Philadelphia Warriors, 90-80, in their basketball association of America game tonight before 2500 fans.

A field goal and foul by John Pelkington, with three and a half minutes to go, pushed the visitors out front, 76-75. Then Carlisle Towery and Pelkington added three points to give the Pistons a lead the Warriors never could overcome.

Philadelphia led, 25-17, at the end of the first quarter, 39-36 at the half and 60-55 at the start of the final period. Joe Fulks again paced the losers with 22 points.

Tar Heels Eye Cotton Bowl

North Carolina, whose alumni would like to see the Tar Heels play in the Sugar Bowl, is apparently leaning to the Cotton Bowl, it appeared last night.

In a meeting with his squad, Coach Carl Snavely reportedly told his unbeaten, once-tied players: "Personally, I prefer the Cotton Bowl."

The Sugar Bowl in New Orleans carries more prestige, but Snavely is believed to favor the Cotton Bowl because of the $105,000 the Dallas game offers to the competing teams, S.M.U. and its opponent.

Snavely's players, at last night's meeting, requested that they be allowed to take two "guests," at the school's expense, to whatever bowl the Tar Heels play in. The meeting was attended by Bob Fetzer, athletic director, and Chuck Erickson, his assistant. The two agreed that Carolina would pay for the expenses for one guest for each player, but took under advisement the request for an additional guest.

North Carolina reportedly is the No. 1 choice of S.M.U., Southwestern Conference champion and Cotton Bowl host. The Sugar Bowl has announced it will make no decision until 7 p. m. Saturday.

There's One Sure Way to Get Army-Navy Tickets—Get Yourself Elected to Congress

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 23 (AP). One sure way of landing a ticket to the Army-Navy football game: Get yourself elected to Congress.

Otherwise, it's not so easy.

They print 100,000 of them, but anyone at Annapolis or West Point, or any street corner for that matter, can tell you that's not enough to go around.

Congressmen are lucky. They're honorary members of the athletic association of each academy. As much, they can claim 16 tickets, 8 from each, but at the usual price.

Even the President has to pay. A Navy circular on how tickets are distributed says the Chief Executive, "has an allotment which he purchases."

Secretaries of the Navy and Cabinet members have allotments, too. Only the squad and coaches get complimentaries.

Press writers in the White House, Army and Navy public relations offices have to buy theirs. As a "return courtesy," athletic officials, coaches and luminaries of the Nation's colleges also can buy seats for their personal use.

Here's the problem, according to the Navy Athletic Association:

Munipical Stadium in Philadelphia, where the services renew their feud again this Saturday, contains exactly 98,593 seats.

Navy controls half, but only 13,962 are between the goal lines. The brigade of Midshipmen occupies 3600.

"Considering that there are 10,597 dues-paying members of the association), 531 Congressmen, the football squad, coaches and others of the official family to be accommodated, it is evident that the members of some class groups will not secure seats between the goal lines," the circular says.

Thus tickets for admirals and ensigns who graduated from the academy have to be rationed. They can have two for their own use, others depending on the number left over. They sit with their classamtes in sections that fan out into the end zones for the younger classes.

Midshipmen's guests use up 12,000 tickets by themselves, but only after alumni receive their share.

Face value is $5 for association members, $6 for others.

Tech Beats Coolidge, 15 to 6; Roosevelt Wins, 14 to 12

McKinley In 3-Way Tie For Second

McKinley Tech defeated Coolidge, 15-6, yesterday in the season finale for both teams. The win gave Tech a tie for second place in the interhigh standings with Anacostia and Eastern. All three teams finished with five won and two lost records.

Coolidge opened the scoring in the second period. The Colts drove 46 yards after a Tech punt, with the running duties being divided between Dan Richardson, Chuck Davis, Jack Brosnan and Kirby Gallagher. The score was set up on an unnecessary roughness penalty against Tech, which carried to the 8. Brosnan plowed over from the 1 a few plays later. "Buzzy" Culler's kick was blocked.

Tech scored two points later in the period when Joe Rice tackled George Turner in his own end zone after Turner had intercepted Jerry Spindler's long pass.

The Trainers scored again with 20 seconds left in the half on a Bob Stewart to Elwood Cooke aerial. Stewart's kick was good.

Spindler scored again with five seconds remaining when he intercepted Jack Brosnan's long desperation heave and returned it 64 yards through the whole Tech team for a touchdown. Bill Passas' pass to Spindler for the attempted extra point was incomplete.

Wilson Beaten by Riders

Roosevelt High School picked the coldest day of the season to get hot and win itself a ball game, squeezing by Wilson yesterday, 14-12, on two perfect placements by Dick Heishman.

The Rough Riders, in winning yesterday, used the same script as the last two years when they were likewise humiliated all season until the final victorious game.

With Terry Huff, its deceptive split-T quarterback handing off judiciously to Bob Wilhelm and Dick Heishman and to Weaver Merriam on the end around play, Roosevelt moved quickly in the first quarter down to the Wilson 15 where a fumble stymied the drive.

Wilson kicked out and Huff continued the same successful tactics, spiced with a 23-yard pass to Merriam. This drive, 54 yards long, went all the way, culminating in Leon Baron's 12-yard scoot around left end.

A Roosevelt blocked kick later in the quarter was recovered on the Rough Rider 22 by Bob Sheele of Wilson. Garry Quinn bulled the ball down in four plays to the 13 as the quarter ended, and George Papafotis, who runs like a string of firecrackers going off, carried it over from there as the second period opened. Papafotis' placement was blocked.

The patented Huff-Weaver end around maneuver brought Roosevelt its second touchdown in the third period, the fleet end gobbling up 43 yards on the play. Heishman iced it down with his second extra point boot.

Wilson's desperation aerial attack as daylight faded in the closing minutes, paid off when Al Sher caught Garry Quinn's 12-yard pass on the 3 and ran it over.

Lineups:

Tackles—DeHaven, Solomon, Baughman.

Blackwood Fights Wright

Joe Blackwood, Paterson, N. J., fighter, now making his home in Washington, will return to Turner's Arena next Monday night in another 10-round headliner against local boy Al Wright.

In his first local fight two weeks ago Blackwood scored a 10-round victory over another local battler, Ken Stribling. In previous bouts he had beaten such topnotchers as Coley Welch (twice), Red Priest, Al Costa, and Gene Farland.

Wright is the fighter who upset Smuggy Hursey on the Joe Louis-Pat Comiskey card at the ball park last summer.

After This Year—Let's Talk of '49

GW Gets Help But Not Where It Needs It

Andy Davis and his "fighting fourteen" George Washington teammates will get reinforcements next year, but not in the middle of the line, where they need them most.

The reason is that the Colonial frosh team of 19 men was a carbon copy of its older brother. It was fairly deep in the backfield and ends, light in the middle of the line, and also shallow in reserves there.

Freshman Coach Andy Victor even had its counterpart to Davis in Bib Cilento, who is being hailed as an even better passer than Davis.

Cilento, a 170-pound halfback from Newark, was outstanding in all five freshman games, but in two of the contests, his passing feats were almost incredible.

Against Maryland, he completed 20 passes out of 25, and against Virginia, he whipped out 15 completions in 18 attempts.

2 Good Plungers

In the plunging fullback department, Coach Bo Rowland will be able to call on two very promising freshman alumni, Joe Kennelli and John Tivnan, both big boys. Kennelli, in particular, will fit into Rowland's scheme of using each player for three positions. Kennelli, a 195-pounder, played tackle and guard on defense.

Jim Johnson and Tom Baise, who were blocking backs at Central High last season, and Scatbacks Lew Ciarroca and Bill Shaw may also worm their way into Rowland's first two backfields.

Two 200-pound tackles, Ed Fitzpatrick from Anacostia High, and Joe Fennell of Pittsburgh, will be welcomed by the varsity's only three tackles, Harvey Shipman, Joe Feula and Clarence Drayer. Two 17-year-old guards, weighing 190 each, but needing more experience, will get their chances, too. They are Bernie Nathan of Albany and Joe Fabian of Pittsburgh.

Colonials Lose Four

Dave Shiver anad Dick Freed, both 6-footers, fast and good receivers, should have no trouble making the varsity.

G. W. loses only four players by graduation, Backs Joe Bernot, Bill Spangler and Dick Koester newcomers will ease the pain of their loss, no doubt.

The Colonials face almost the same tough lineup of foes that they met this season. Washington and Lee replaces The Citadel, and Wake Forest has not yet officially been put on the G. W. slate. But the Colonials again will meet Virginia, Kansas, Maryland, Duke, Georgetown, Lafayette, V. M. I., and V. P. I. in 1949. HERB HEFT.

Terps Lose Entire Backfield, But Pick Up 'Mighty Mo'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland doesn't complete its present season until Saturday against West Virginia, but the Terps much prefer to speak of next year when football is mentioned.

And what do the College Parkers have coming up for '49?

Listed in the order of their importance, they are:

1. Halfback Ed Modzelewski, pronounced just as it's spelled and that's not guaranteed.
2. A stadium seating 33,580.
3. A schedule which doesn't include Vanderbilt.

This Mr. Modzelewski, who calls himself just plain Modzelewski for short, is only one of 38 freshmen who'll be available for varsity consumption next season, but from the talk at Tatumtown he's THE one.

He's 19, 6-foot-t-inch tall and weighs 202 pounds. "Mad-Man" Modzelewski hails from Harbracht, Pa., a hamlet only 2 tons away from the coal mines.

He's faster than Lu Gambino—a 10-second man, runs harder and what's more he passes and kicks. Mighty Mo is just what the doctor ordered to correct the ailments in Maryland's attack. He didn't come to Maryland accidentally.

Representatives from other institutions of single-wing and T formation education, such as Purdue, Indiana, Ohio State, Penn State and L. S. U., had him encircled for three days, but George Barclay, Terp assistant coach and an old Harbracht, Pa., man himself, broke through the iron ring and fetched him for Maryland.

Maryland old-timers like Bell Hottel, George Cook, Matty Mathias and Bucky Clemson claim Mighty Mo is as powerful as the battleship which wasn't named after him and stronger than Testudo, Maryland's 300-pound bronze turtle.

He'll be the right-halfback next year. He was all everything in Pennsylvania high school circles, but what's important to the Terps right now is that he'll all Maryland's.

Over at left halfback you'll probably see another sophomore, a Maryland native for a change. Buck Earley, a sprinter from Hagerstown who teamed with Modzelewski to lead the Terp frosh to four lopsided victories in five starts, will probably team with him in the varsity. Buck is 18, 5 feet 10 inches, and is fast as a sailor with a buck on payday.

And there's still likely to be another sophomore among the Terp starters next fall. That's Henry Fox, 19-year-old pass-catching end from White Plains, New York. He's 6 feet 3 inches, weighs 190

To replace the graduating Harry Bohk at fullback, the Old Liners went up to Philadelphia and plucked Jack Brewster, of Catholic High, blocking back. He's a 200-pound 6-footer and an All-Pennsylvania choice.

Remember those two Marines who enlisted at Maryland after discharge from the Leathernecks—Guard Ray Bender and Tackle Ed O'Connor? They were freshmen this year, too, and are now ready to step up and battle Ray Krouse, Jim Goodman and Bob Ward for regular jobs. Bender weighs 190, O'Connor a mere 35 pounds more.

And another likely tackle prospect is Joe Moss, an all-Stater from Ridgley, W. Va. The Terps and V. M. I. were in a tug-of-war for his services, but Maryland won. Moss, 6-foot, 220 pounder, was shifted from fullback to tackle and loves it.

And if the Terps need any congressional assistance next fall they've got that, too. Joe Tydings, 20-year-old son of Maryland Senator Millard Tydings, is rated a good end prospect. The Havre de Grace boy is 20, weighs 190 and goes 6 feet 3-inches upward.

The Terps lose their entire varsity backfield this year, but they're not worried. They've latched on to Mad-Man Modzelewski and defy the opposition to do the same. Yeah, Mo.

Hoya Hopes Depend on Lettermen

By Jack Walsh

After two successive losing seasons, Georgetown hardly can be blamed for looking ahead to next year. And the suspicion is that things will get better before they get any worse.

Except for two passers—Frank Mattingly and Bob Deacon—the smallest freshman team in years isn't expected to provide much in the way of reinforcements. However, this year's squad won't be hurt to any appreciable extent by graduation.

Nearly a dozen Hoyas bow out but only the end position will suffer. George Benigni and Bill Dzugan, really fine wingmen, won't be replaced easily. Even here, though, Georgetown can get by if the injured Al Sarashevitz, a starter, comes back whole.

Fran Desmond, Bob Noppinger, Gene Fitzgerald and Bill Resch are other experienced ends capable George Murtagh should develop.

Mattingly, a Charlotte Hall boy, and Deacon, a teammate of Billy Conn's at St. Benedict's of Newark, have shown enough promise to make Coach Jack Hagerty plan a return to the T-formation next season.

Aside from a passer, Mac Cara, peppery frosh coach, doesn't think he can supply one regular. Said Cara, "Our linemen aren't very big and I don't think there's one we can count on for next season."

The boys with the best possibilities are Tackles Phil Leturneau and Joe Cimini and Guard Daryl Johnson.

If little Babe Baranowski, lost after the second game, recovers fully from his fractured collarbone injury, the Hoyas will make trouble for the nine opponents Rome Schwagel will announce next month

And then there's always Billy Conn. Billy the Kid, can go all the way if he isn't again hampered by injuries—and he can take Georgetown with him.

Trinidad Boys Seek 5th Win

The 90-pound Trinidad Boys Club, undefeated in 14 games this year, will meet the Merrick Boys Club on the Ellipse Thursday in the game which may decide the Boys Club of Washington championship.

A victory over Merrick would put pace-setting Trinidad beyond the reach of the runnerup teams. Trinidad has a record of 6 and 0 in league play this year and only two losses in its remaining games can keep it from the city title.

A defeat by Merrick is unlikely since Trinidad already has defeated them 32-0 this year, and Merrick hasn't won a league game.

G. W. High Meets W.-L. Tomorrow Before 11,500

State Title Involved in 25th Game

If you haven't already bought your ticket for the Thanksgiving morning Washington-Lee-George Washington High football classic in Alexandria, you'd better stay home and listen to it over the radio. All 11,500 seats have been sold out.

It's the twenty-fifth meeting of the two traditional rivals and the stakes have never been higher. Besides the Ol' Oaken Bucket and Northern Virginia championship which go to the winner, an added prize may be the State high school championship.

GW of Alexandria is in third place with a 5-1 record while W-L of Arlington is in fourth in the 20 team Class A loop with 4-1. Hampton, the leader, has a 6-1 record with a Thanksgiving Day appointment with Hopewell.

If GW and Hopewell both win, GW will win the title for the first time in 25 years. If W-L and Hopewell both win W-L will tie for its first state grid championship with Roanoke, which has a 5-1 record.

The Ol' Oaken Bucket is presently in the hands of GW, which whipped the Little Generals, 32-7, in their 1947 Turkey Day meeting. However, W-L has a series edge on the Presidents, with 12 wins against nine losses and three ties.

Records of the two teams are even this year, against league and nonleague opponents. GW will throw a five-game winning streak into Thursday's game in an effort to halt W-L's six-game victory string. Over the season, GW has a 7-1-1 record against W-L's 7-2-0 record.

They have played three common foes this season. GW trounced Norview of Norfolk, 32-7, and Fairfax, 50-0, and tied Lane of Charlottesville, 13-13. Washington-Lee trounced Norview, 27-0, Fairfax, 50-0, and beat Lane, 21-0.

The game may develop into a scoring duel with Bobby Via of GW trying to outpoint W-L's Jack Gilfillan. Via has 11 touchdowns to his credit, compared to 12 for Gilfillan.

GW's triple-threat is Teddy Potts, who has passed for nine touchdowns and scored six himself. Gilfillan does most of W-L's passing, but gets help in the running department from Bruce Hillenbrand and John Herrlein.

A colorful parade through Alexandria will precede the game, which starts at 11 a.m. At halftime, Harry Gilmer, Redskins' rookie, will crown the Queen of the game.

Superman Meets Kampfer Tonight

The Golden Superman will seek his seventh local victory in a row tonight at Turner's Arena in a co-feature wrestling bout against Hans Kampfer.

Laverne Baxter, the Texas bad man, meets Ivan Kamaroff in the other half of the feature.

Henry Piers and Marvin Mercer will oppose Michele Leone and Jim Wallis in a special two-man bout. The opener at 8:45 is between Herman Rubinstein, former local high school athlete, and Henry Finkelstein of New York.

Houston Elected Harvard Captain

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 23 (AP).—Howie Houston, husky 22-year-old lineman who received honorable mention in the Associated Press All-East selections, today was elected captain of the Harvard football team for 1949.

Houston, a veteran of three years' service with the Army Air Force, has been a stalwart for Harvard for three seasons and has been rated by Coach Art Valpey on a par with any of Michigan's linemen. Houston is a resident of Haverhill, Mass.

Alexandria Title Game

A championship game in the Alexandria 160-pound Night Football League will be played tonight between the Wasco Bullets and the Maryland Shamrocks in the Alexnadria Municipal Stadium at 8:15.

Hack Wilson, Former Home Run King, Dies

of one kind of trouble or another during most of his five years with the Cubs. They finally gave him the big goodbye in 1931.

Wilson then had a spell with Brooklyn but wound up in 1934 with the Philadelphia Phillies, who had him only a month before handout out a release.

After a few years running a sporting goods store in Martinsburg, W. Va., where he began his baseball career, Wilson turned up as a night club impresario in Chicago in 1939.

He reached Baltimore in 1942 as a tool plant worker with the Glenn L. Martin Co. After the war he held various odd jobs and early this year landed as a laborer with the City Parks Department. In the summer he was made manager of a swimming pool.

He had suffered fainting spells lately and on October 4 went to a hospital for treatment of a head cut suffered when he fell out of bed.

Wilson's last public appearance was on the "We, the People" radio show in New York last Tuesday. At that time he gave words of advice to the younger generation to heed the advice of their elders and to save their money.

Wilson was born in Ellwood City, Pa., in 1900. A former coal miner, he joined the Martinsburg team of the Blue Ridge League in 1921, after some semipro experience.

Two years later he went to Portsmouth in the Virginia Leagle. He hit .388 in 1923, and the New York Giants thought well of that. He made a good start at the Polo Grounds but went into a slump, and John McGraw finally sent him to Toledo.

The Giants somehow allowed the option to lapse and the Cubs got Wilson in 1926. He hit .321 that year and went on to the peak in 1930, when his batting average was .356.

He was suspended in September, 1931, for breaking training, and Owner William Wrigley said Hack would never again wear a Cub uniform.

He was handed over to the St. Louis Cardinals, who wanted him only for trading purposes. He went to Brooklyn and played in 1932 for $16,500, had an indifferent season and got only a $9000 offer the next year.

D. C. Team Sets Duckpin Record

The National Duck Pin Bowling Congress announced yesterday that a new world's record has been set for duckpins by the Hutchinson Furniture Team of Washington.

The furniture bowlers broke the team record by rolling a 797. Sam Shreve was high man with 183. The former record also was held by the Hutchinsons. They rolled a 773 on January 7 of this year.

IN LAST 16 MONTHS...

HERE'S THE RECORD

Between July 1, 1947, and October 21, 1948, a total of 214,616 forward-looking young American men signed original enlistment contracts with the U. S. Army. This number is greater than the number of men who obtained jobs with any other American business during the same period.

During this sixteen-month period the total of all enlistments in your U. S. Army amounted to 341,959. Of this group, 93,473 veterans returned to the Army—men who had discovered that the U. S. Army offered them more than civilian life. And in the same period 33,870 men re-enlisted to continue their satisfying, productive Army careers.

Thousands upon thousands of intelligent young men are finding worth-while, remunerative and satisfying careers in the Army. And every day more men are taking advantage of the unlimited opportunities the Army offers—opportunities that can't be duplicated in civilian life.

For instance, in the month of August, 1948, alone, 44,204 signed enlistment contracts of three years or more with the Army.

Today fifty-seven per cent of the volunteers in the Army have had previous military service—enjoyable, happy service which they want to continue.

This impressive record is solid, conclusive proof that the Regular U. S. Army offers the kind of career opportunity that the young men of our nation demand—an opportunity not only to learn but to serve at the same time.

WHY MEN RE-ENLIST

Ranking high among the reasons thousands of men give for selecting or continuing careers in the Army are the chances for rapid advancement in their chosen fields. Today the Army is expanding fast. This expansion means unlimited opportunity for promotion of skilled, highly trained men.

Advancement is important; however, there are many other good, sound reasons why so many intelligent men choose to stay in the Army. Here are but a few:

☆ On the day a man enlists the Army starts a retirement-benefit "stake" for him which continues to grow as long as he stays. At the end of six years he has established an equity which compares with a retirement benefit of $6,250.

☆ Army technical schools offer the most advanced and specialised training in interesting, practical fields—give technical "know-how" you'd have to pay for in civilian life.

HERE'S WHAT THE NEW ARMY OFFERS YOU

Before you choose any career, compare it with a future in the Regular U. S. Army. Never before has the Army offered such tremendous opportunities for a real career to the alert, ambitious young men of America.

On the one hand you have the chance to serve your country while learning a new trade or skill—to further your education in important fields. And on the other hand there are the financial advantages, the job security, the retirement benefits, the chances for rapid promotion, the free medical and dental care that are yours in the Army.

A career in the U. S. Army is an opportunity that just can't be beat. And it's a lifetime opportunity! Get the full details now at your nearest U. S. Army and U. S. Air Force Recruiting Office.

Colonials' Andy Davis Still Ranks 4th in Nation on Total Offense

Terps Hang On in Three Divisions

New York, Nov. 23 (AP).—Andy Davis, George Washington's stellar freshman halfback, remained in fourth place in the Nation in total offense this week, but it's doubtful that he'll remain there until the last game of the season.

The Colonial ace finished his 10-game season last week against Georgetown with a total of 1231 yards gained for 10 games. However, Jim Finks of Tulsa, who holds down fifth with 1184, and several others on Davis' heels, still have games left to play.

Andy completed only two passes in five attempts against the Hoyas, and dropped two notches in the aerial department to fourteenth. Andy has 61 completions in 135 tosses for a .452 average and three touchdowns. His tosses gained 888 yards.

Johnny Papit of Virginia is fifth in rushing with 834 yards in eight games. He'll have a chance to add to his gains when the Cavaliers meet North Carolina Saturday in Charlottesville, Va.

Bobby Thomason, VMI's rubber-armed quarterback, ranks third in passing with 78 for 153 attempts for 1014 yards and 12 touchdowns.

University of Maryland, whipped in two successive starts by North Carolina and Vanderbilt, still held ranking in three departments. The Terps are fourth in forward pass defense, sixth in total defense and eleventh in rushing offense.

County Boys Clubs Play for Title

The Prince Georges County Boys Club Football League takes over Byrd Stadium in College Park on Thanksgiving Day to stage the senior division championship game.

Caps Waging Battle for Center Toomay

There has been a slight hitch in the negotiations designed to plant another skyscraper among the Washington Capitols.

It appears that John Toomay, the large lad in demand, was already trying on a Baltimore Bullet uniform while the Caps were blithely sending feelers via telegram to the Toomay residence in California.

Mr. Paul Rothgeb, the manager of the Capitols, is crying. He wants Toomay, bad, and insists that Baltimore give him back. What Rothgeb wants to know is how could Baltimore sign Toomay when the Caps put him on their negotiation list way before the Bullets did?

The free agent was duty bound to listen to Washington first, Rothgeb says, and the telephones have been clanging between here and BAA President Maurice Podoloff's office. Mr. Podoloff has duly noted the case and has even gone so far as to reckon that maybe the Caps had completed the paper work first.

It also was disclosed yesterday that Freddie Scolari, the dancing fireplug, has left his rampaging team mates and returned here for treatment of a sprained left ankle. The ankle got that way in the Rochester game last Sunday. Freddie hopes to have it mended in time for the Caps' next home game Saturday night.

Social Groups Map Legislative Plan

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A bill of particulars for the Eighty-first Congress is being prepared by more than a dozen national welfare organization.

The groups, most of which deal in child welfare problems, met at the Willard Hotel yesterday under auspices of the American Parents Committee, Inc., to discuss the legislation they wish passed. It includes:

1. Broadening of the Social Security Act with emphasis on coverage for children.

2. Expenditure of 300 million dollars per year on Federal aid to education.

3. A broad survey of school construction needs and Federal money to meet those needs.

4. Money to set up adequate local public health services.

5. A national health insurance law to prepay costs of medical care and hospitalization.

6. Increased funds for safeguarding the health of mothers and children.

7. Improvement of labor camps for migratory workers.

8. Increased appropriations for the national school lunch program.

9. Construction of 600,000 urban housing units and 200,000 rural, nonfarm units.

10. Revision of the child labor law to prohibit farm work for children under 16; revision of the District of Columbia laws to eliminate present abuses.

11. Establishment of a research institute in the Children's Bureau to investigate all phases of child life.

12. Establishment of a fund to demonstrate the services of the public library.

13. Increased appropriations to the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

R. B. Marston, director of the legislative-Federal relations division of the National Education Association, told the group that "proper education of youth cannot be done until the Federal Government assumes some of the responsibility."

Marston said an "enormous increase in elementary and secondary schools is in prospect," while there is a "huge deficit in the field of teacher education accumulating in the Nation."

Mrs. Jack Fahy, associate Washington director of the American Parents Committee, said that last year one city in 10 was on half-day school sessions, and in some areas, including California, there was a three-shift day.

Dr. John D. Porterfield, director of the Ohio Department of Public Health, told the group that 200,000 people die each year who could be saved with the application of proper public health methods at the local level.

Dr. Edgar Fuller, an official in the United States Office of Education, speaking in an individual capacity predicted that "with inflation, and an increase in the number of school lunch programs, the present Federal appropriation isn't enough. The school lunch program, if it is to continue on its present level, must have more Federal aid."

Lee Johnson executive vice president of the national public housing conference, declared that progress made in housing since 1937 "had just about evaporated when suddenly we won an election on November 2."

Johnson said the public has a "terrific responsibility to make sure the Administration comes up with the kind of program for all housing that makes sense for all people."

He declared the 800,000-unit production next year is "completely within the capacity of the American people to produce."

Mrs. Gertrude Folks Zimand, general secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, Inc., who advocated several reforms on child labor, said she thought "Congress should clean up child labor in its own back yard."

She said the present District child labor law was "pretty good when it was enacted 20 years ago." However, under that law, she said, any child may leave school for full-time work on his 14th birthday if he has completed the eighth grade.

"Twelve-year-old boys can sell papers on the city streets and 10-year-old boys can distribute papers on fixed routes at any hour of the day or night. I hope Congress will revise the Child Labor Law of the District of Columbia."

George J. Hecht, chairman of the American Parents Committee and publisher of "Parents' Magazine," explained at yesterday's sessions that the Parents Committee does not necessarily indorse all the legislative proposals advanced, but arranged the meeting so that organizations sponsoring important legislation could gain support for their measures.

The committee, made up of businessmen, political leaders, educators and social workers, is sponsoring three bills at present, and is expected to support other legislation in the child welfare field. The bills it plans to initiate are the school health services, Federal aid for school construction, and the child research bill.

Shenandoah Caverns, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Sale of the Shenandoah Caverns, valley of Virginia tourist attraction, to H. B. Long, operator of caverns at Front Royal, was disclosed today by the Shenandoah Caverns Corp.

Frank Chapman, manager and vice president, said the sale price was more than $200,000. Describing it as one of the "largest real estate transactions in the valley in a long time," Chapman said the sale will be completed at a stockholders' meeting Friday.

Campaign Extension Expected With Chest at 71% of Goal

The 1949 Red Feather campaign will hold what was scheduled as its final report luncheon today—but it appeared likely yesterday that the drive would be extended again.

All units are scheduled to turn in contributions at today's session, set for 12:15 p. m. at the Hotel Washington. Thirty-three awards for outstanding service during the drive will be presented.

Chauncey G. Parker, campaign chairman, has indicated canvassing will continue until a week from Friday. "People don't give unless they're asked," he pointed out.

The campaign seeks to raise $4,566,790 to help support 104 agencies and the USO. So far, pledges for 71 per cent of the goal have been turned in.

Fund-Raising Dance

The Curley Club, a Catholic social group, will hold a fund-raising dance Friday night, beginning at 10, in the west ballroom of Hotel Shoreham. Admission will be $1.50, including tax.

Falls Church City Workers Get More Space

Falls Church, its frame City Hall bulging at the seams, is taking steps to give its municipal workers— and its city council—more elbow room.

To make way for the expanding city government, the Falls Church public library moved this week from the City Hall to a new location at 151 East Broad st.

Part of the former library space will be combined with other offices to form a council meeting room about 13 by 20 feet in size. The remainder of the space will be used for city offices.

Looking further into the future, Councilman Sherman Wells, chairman of the council's buildings and grounds committee, said his group would meet "shortly" to consider purchase of the Gibson tract on West st. for use as a possible new City Hall site.

Falls Church now has an option to buy the land, Wells said, but the option expires March 1, 1949. City officials say the site of the present City Hall is not large enough to permit adequate expansion.

Md. Farmhand Admits Attack on Girl

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 23 (AP).—Charles Andrew Wolfe, 34-year-old farmhand who is married and has three children, pleaded guilty today to a charge of assault with intent to rape a 16-year-old girl.

Under an unusual Maryland law, Wolfe still faces the possibility of a death sentence—despite the fact that the State did not elect to fight for a conviction on a straight charge of rape. However, the extreme penalty is not usually imposed under the charge of assault with intent to rape.

A defense attorney told Judge Joseph D. Mish that Wolfe is "not without a sense of responsibility toward his obligations" to the girl, who is an expectant mother. At the same time, the attorney said, the girl "hung around the barn" where Wolfe was working and perhaps was not entirely blameless.

Pay Hikes Reported Discussed for Court, President, Congress

Substantial pay raises for the President, Vice President, Supreme Court members and members of Congress were debated several days ago by the Hoover Commission, according to word that has reached Capitol Hill. This is the story behind it:

Former President Hoover revealed last week that his 12-man nonpartisan commission on Government reorganization had considered pay raises for middle and top Government officials in the executive branch.

A bloc on the commission, it's reported, pointed out that the salaries of all officials in all branches of Government are as much out of line with present-day needs as those of Cabinet members and others in the executive branch. They insisted that the entire problem of official pay be considered in the report by the commission—a view Hoover is said to have agreed with.

Otherwise, they argued, it would be most difficult to persuade Congress to raise the salaries of Cabinet members and other officials since it's a well-known fact that the Congress is most reluctant to pay any officials more than its members receive. The four members of Congress on the commission were in general agreement with this argument.

It's only preliminary at this time, but a pay schedule at approximately these levels was reported to have been debated:

That the salary of the President be raised from $75,000 to $150,000 a year;

That the Vice President be paid $50,000 instead of $20,000;

That the Speaker of the House be paid $35,000 instead of $20,000;

That the Chief Justice of the United States be given a raise from $25,000 to $35,000, and that the eight associate justices be paid $32,000 each instead of $25,000;

That members of Congress be paid $20,000 each instead of $12,500 plus a $2500 tax-free expense account;

That cabinet members be raised from $15,000 to $25,000 each;

That undersecretaries, commission, board and corporation members be boosted to $20,000 each; that assistant secretaries be paid $18,000 each, and that other Federal executives be given corresponding pay raises, and finally,

That the maximum salary to top-drawer civil servants be lifted to about $15,000.

A survey shows that the President's salary hasn't been touched since 1909, when it was raised by Congress from $50,000 to $75,000. With the expenses of his office and high taxes, President Truman is reported to have confided to a friend recently that he had been able to save only from $3000 to $4000 a year from his salary.

The pay of the Vice President was raised from $10,000 to $12,000 on March 4, 1909; up to $15,000 on March 4, 1925, and to $20,000 on August 2, 1946.

A bill written into law in 1946 raised the salaries of Federal judges by $5000 each, including the Supreme Court justices. It isn't clear if the Hoover proposal would raise the salaries of all Federal judges or if any increase would be limited to those on the Supreme Court.

Members of Congress voted themselves a $2500 pay boost as of January 3, 1947, in addition to a $2500 tax-free expense allowance, a salary equivalent to a gross of about $16,500. House members had voted themselves the $2500 expense account a year earlier.

With few exceptions, the salaries of Cabinet members and many other Federal officials haven't been adjusted since they were set by Congress in 1925. As a result, very few Federal officials are living on their Government pay checks. A $10,000 Federal salary in 1925 has shrunk to $3500 in buying power as of today.

Meantime, the Senate Civil Service Committee will hold public hearings on December 13 and 14 on a bill to raise the salaries of Cabinet Members and 200-odd other Federal officials. The bill has the indorsement of Senators Flanders (R., Vt.), Baldwin (R., Conn.) and O'Conor (D. Md.).

At the hearings it's hoped that the President, through a White House or Budget Bureau representative, will express his views on salaries for top officials. It's also planned to ask Hoover, Arthur S. Fleming, Defense Secretary Forrestal and other members of the Hoover Commission to testify. The Budget Bureau yesterday sent a memo to Federal officials asking for their comments on the Flanders-Baldwin-O'Conor bill.

Thanksgiving Day Preparations . . .

Inaugural Budget Hike Is Studied

Expenses May Reach $200,000; Popular Subscription to Swell Fund Is Mentioned

Preparation for the January 20 inaugural went into high gear yesterday following President Truman's approval of the general plans outlined as they shape up now.

Faced with rising prices and probable increased parade stand construction costs, the Inaugural Committee, headed by Melvin D. Hildreth, has begun studying the possibility of pushing its $150,000 budget to $200,000.

Also under consideration, according to General Chairman Hildreth, is a suggestion that the $150,000 budget, which is guaranteed by District businessmen, be swelled by popular contributions.

The White House will not be the scene of the Presidential Inauguration Day reception because of repairs being made on it.

President and Mrs. Truman will hold the reception at 5 p. m. in the National Gallery of Art, with admission by card only, according to Mrs. James M. Helm, White House social secretary. The luncheon which usually follows the inaugural ceremony will be omitted this year, Mrs. Helm said.

An "enormous number" of requests for invitations to the inaugural has been received at the White House, Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said yesterday. Ross said such requests should go directly to the Inaugural Committee, which is located in Room 123, Tariff Building, 700 E st. nw.

At committee headquarters, John F. Morrissey, director of ticket sales, disclosed that "about $8000" in ticket applications has already been received. He added that 150 persons stepped up to the Tariff Building ticket office in Room 166 yesterday, and that prices for parade stand seats range from $2.50 at Pennsylvania and Constitution aves. nw., to $10 in the White House block.

Four hundred fifty-eight District firemen will work with police along the parade route, Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, announced yesterday.

Utilization of firemen along the route, as was done when President Truman returned to Washington after his election, will make it unnecessary to bring in uniformed police from other cities. A force of 125 out-of-town detectives will be brought in, however, to foil pickpockets and confidence men, Chief Barrett said.

A plan to house air-traveling inaugural visitors in Philadelphia is under study, a committee spokesman disclosed. He said 1000 Philadelphia rooms would be arranged for under the plan, with visitors being shuttled by air between that city and Washington.

Municipal Architect Merrel A. Coe said yesterday his office is drawing up specifications for erection of parade stands between East and West Executive aves. Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, engineer commissioner, is expected to ask for bids on the stands soon, he said.

Television, radio and newsreel representatives will meet at 10 a. m. today in the District Building board room to discuss plans for covering the ceremonies.

ASPIRANT GETS IN "UNDER THE WIRE"—Police Pvt. P. D. Lavery, no small member of the Traffic Division, congratulates Peter G. Barrick on the latter's apparent good luck. Barrick, of 1318 Holbrooke st. ne., who has been trying to stretch himself an inch to get on the police force, will probably become one of the boys in blue now that the Commissioners have lowered height requirements to 5 feet 7 inches. Used Car Prices Drop As Much as $500 Here

Some Dealers Selling at Cost in Effort to Break Even; Slump Prevails Over South

By Walter T. Pulliam
Post Reporter

The used car market here has slumped with late standard-make cars selling yesterday from $100 to $300 below prices of a month ago.

On some less-popular models, price markdowns were reported as high as $500.

The slump was so great that some dealers, in an attempt to break even, were trying to unload their cars at prices they had paid for them wholesale.

Even so, one dealer reported, the flow of cars from his lot had dwindled to almost zero.

W. D. Griffith, president of the National Capital Used Car Dealers Association, said the slump had hit not only Washington dealers but used car lots throughout the South.

Models of 1947 cars priced four weeks ago at $1995 and $2050, offered at $1695 and $1750.

Griffith said the slump had hit later models more than older ones and so-called off-makes more than others.

The wholesale as well as the retail market, Griffith said, has been affected, but many dealers here, he added, were caught with cars purchased wholesale before the slump set in.

What caused it?

A survey found dealers here assigning a variety of causes: (1) arrival of new model cars; (2) seasonal conditions; (3) new credit regulations requiring more cash down and higher monthly payments; (4) the presidential election.

One Northwest dealer frankly attributed it to the high prices of used cars themselves. Said he: "Used cars are usually bought by people who can't afford new cars, but they got so high the people who want them can't buy them."

County School Plan Snarled in Row on Braun

Arlington's school construction program was snarled last night by controversy over the recent appointment of Dr. Edward J. Braun as associate school superintendent.

John Locke Green, Arlington treasurer, indicated at a special school board meeting he would not sign vouchers for the 70-classroom construction project because, he said, Braun drew up the program with illegal powers.

At the same time, School Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, who protested the appointment of Braun at the board's previous meeting, said Commonwealth's Attorney Denmen T. Rucker wrote him that in his opinion the school board cannot assign as much of the superintendents duties as it did to an assistant superintendent of schools.

Kemp added that it was also his own opinion that the appointment of Braun as assistant superintendent was "illegal."

Green told the board that all money warrants to pay for the 70-classroom construction program, first phase of school expansion, authorized by voters in two separate bond referendums, must be countersigned by the treasurer.

Green, an outspoken foe of the $4,750,000 bond issue approved by voters November 2, said he was serving notice "on the board now that they (the warrants) must be properly and legally drawn."

"The board will take care of the legal end," Board Chairman Barnard Joy, replied.

"We'll test that in court when the proper time comes," Green said.

Green last night inquired: "How can the board delegate authority to Dr. Braun which comes under the superintendent of schools?"

Kemp, however, last night expressed "general approval" of the 70-room construction plan, which would employ some funds from the $4,750,000 bond issue, and all of a $1,776,000 issue voted in May 1947.

Court Order

Mother Gets Children on Thanksgiving

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A 39-year-old Washington mother who recently lost the right to even see her two sons will have them with her for Thanksgiving dinner.

She is Mrs. Rose Barbara Moore, of 776 Princeton pl. nw., a Government clerk-typist. Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws of District Court earlier this month sent Mrs. Moore to jail for a day because she refused to give up those sons, John, 10, and James, 6.

He looked at the woman with the grayish-blond hair yesterday, shook his head and said:

"I'm sorry for your situation. You obviously have been nervous and upset."

Several years ago, Mrs. Moore divorced John A. Moore, hardware dealer and farmer of Mount Airy, Md. She gave him the two sons because she could not support them properly.

But then she regretted it. She began a long court fight, was allowed to have the children on alternate weekends, holidays and for half the summers.

But she continued an unavailing fight for their exclusive custody.

Finally, she kept the children from the father, who testified he had pleaded with her to abide by the court orders. Judge Laws sent a marshal to Mrs. Moore's home. The children were handed over to the father and the mother spent the night in District Jail, was cited for contempt and denied the right to see the boys.

No one was happy about the situation.

Moore's attorney, Charles Patton Henry, told the court yesterday that all his client wanted was a guarantee that Mrs. Moore would do what the court said and would cause no more trouble.

Her court-appointed attorney, Charles E. Ford, gave this guarantee to the court. He said he was sure Mrs. Moore had learned her lesson.

Judge Laws then dismissed the contempt citation and restored Mrs. Moore's previous rights to see the children.

They will be delivered to the mother for Thanksgiving. Then the father will call for them and take them back to Mount Airy, to return them to the mother on that alternate weekend.

Taxi Driver Near Death, Suspect Held

Arthur McClary, 22, of 1412 V st. nw., was jailed yesterday when he failed to raise $25,000 bond set in Municipal Court when he was charged with the $5 robbery of a taxi driver who is reportedly near death from the beating.

Judge Thomas D. Quinn set the high bond and continued the case until December 12. The victim, Charles Williams, 25, of 121 L st. se., is in critical condition in Casualty Hospital and not expected to live, according to Assistant United States Attorney Andrew J. Howard.

Williams was beaten several times over the head with a whisky bottle and a brick. He apparently was left for dead by his assailant, according to police.

Williams regained consciousness long enough to give a description of the robber. McClary was subsequently arrested and blood was found on his clothing, police said.

The hacker was found unconscious beside his taxi near Puerto Rico and Michigan aves. ne. early yesterday.

Alert Policemen

Gift Scotch Brings Arrests; Stolen Ring Clew to Thefts

A stolen diamond ring valued at $450 led police yesterday to the solution of five burglaries, and perhaps 10 more.

James L. Ward, 24, 3609 43d ave., Colmar Manor, a mechanic, was held in $3500 bond on charges of housebreaking and grand larceny. Police said he confessed to five burglaries.

Credit for running down the housebreakings went to Det. Sergts. Edward F. Talbot and Benjamin D. Clark. Their investigation began when they turned up the stolen ring in a pawn shop, and traced it back to the man who had pawned it.

Questioning of the man led to John M. Harris, 43, 903 New York ave. nw., who, according to police, when charged with receiving stolen property, said he had received the ring from Ward.

Ward admitted stealing the ring and four other burglaries, police said. He is being questioned about 10 other housebreakings, it was said. Police disclosed they recovered about $1000 in plunder from Ward's home and a bus terminal locker.

Plans of Joseph Mack, 47, to open a night club were jolted last night because he asked the wrong man for help.

Police said Mack already had some fine Scotch whisky guaranteed to satisfy the most demanding of palates.

But, among other things, police said, the whisky wasn't Mack's. It belongs to Richard H. Jenkins, an engineering firm executive, and was stolen over the weekend from the basement of his apartment building at 3808 Davis pl. nw., and was valued at $1492.

Police last night charged Mack, who lives at 1413-Corcoran st. nw., and Parnell M. Smith, 30, of 1529 Q st. nw., with housebreaking and grand larceny.

Credit for the arrests was given to Pvt. Jesse Johnson of the Second Precinct, honored as an outstanding policeman for the month of July, and Detective J. E. Burke of the Seventh Precinct.

Johnson said Mack asked his aid in renting a site for a night club, giving him a bottle of Scotch in advance payment. Johnson checked the serial number and said he found the bottle was part of the liquor stolen from Jenkins.

He said he saw Mack again yesterday on the street, and that Mack told him a friend would be along soon and give him more Scotch. When Smith appeared both men were arrested.

Evidence Voided

Six of 7 Held In Numbers Case Cleared

Six of seven men arrested as members of a so-called Thomas Circle numbers gang were freed of charges yesterday.

Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court ordered the dismissals upon recommendation of Assistant United States Attorney John Conliff. Most of the Government's evidence in the case had been declared inadmissible because of arrests without sufficient cause.

Conliff said he could not proceed under the circumstances.

One defendant, Webster Stewart, 29, of 411 L st. se., pleaded guilty to operation of a lottery, and his case was continued pending a probation office presentence report. Stewart was arrested after driving a Veterans' Administration truck to Thomas Circle. He was seen handing a brown envelope to another defendant, police said.

The others, all arrested at the same time and who were exonerated in the court, are:

Four Persons, Equipment Taken in Gambling Raid

Vice squad raiders reported yesterday they seized four persons, numbers slips and other gambling paraphernalia in a house at 429 8th st. sw.

Booked at the Fourth Precinct Station on charges of operating a lottery and possessing numbers slips were Mrs. Blanche T. McCormick, 49, and Major Bandy, 37, who live at the 8th st. address; Reginald E. Smith, 29, of 945 E st. sw., and Alexander N. Bethune, 28, of 1811 Fenwick st. ne.

After being fingerprinted at Police Headquarters, the four were released in $1500 bond each for appearance this morning before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

The city directory lists Mrs. McCormick as a laborer for the Public Buildings Administration; Bandy as a construction worker, and an Alexander N. Bethune is listed as a clerk for the Public Buildings Administration.

Clashes Mark Hearing on Loan Rules

Representatives of the District government and local finance firms clashed repeatedly yesterday at a hearing called to iron out differences on proposed small loan regulations.

He charged that the Commissioners are attempting to do "what the courts haven't done."

He vigorously objected to a proposed amendment to one section of the suggested regulations, which provides that the difference between the cash price and credit price of an item would not be considered usurious provided "the latter price was fixed for the purpose of credit and not to violate the regulations."

He sought a definite commitment that the difference between the cash and credit price would not be considered interest or usury.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray, who prepared the proposed regulations, charged that frequently the "disparity" between the balance due on a transaction and the amount the purchaser has to pay is "shocking." He told about one case where a purchaser bought an automobile for $2895, paid $1100 down and was required to pay a balance of $2613.

Lichtenberg objected on the ground that Gray is "always willing to present the views of someone who complains . . ."

Bernard Margolius, representing the National Capital Used Car Dealers Association, went on record for the organization in support of Lichtenberg's position. He emphasized, however, that he would not "condone" use of the conditional sales contract as a "trick or scheme."

Another meeting will probably be held early next week.

Husband Ordered Cleared in Fatal Shooting of Wife

Rubie J. King, 39, of 1421 1st st. nw., was ordered acquitted yesterday of a first-degree murder charge growing out of the fatal shooting of his wife, Lucinda, 23.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court ordered the acquittal at the conclusion of the Government's case.

In requesting the directed acquittal, defense attorney Charles E. Ford pointed out that there was nothing contrary to the view that the shooting was accidental, as King had told police.

Last April, according to police, Mrs. King was shot through the heart with a .38 caliber bullet. King said he was loading the gun for protection of his wife when it was discharged accidentally. A coroner's jury had held earlier that King was not responsible for the death, but the District grand jury indicted him.

Policeman To Face Trial For Conduct

Accused of climbing up a porch and breaking a second-floor window to call on a woman who did not want to see him, Police Pvt. William A. Gordon, 31, of 121 Adams st. nw., of the Thirteenth Precinct, faces Police Trial Board action.

Capt. William T. Murphy suspended Gordon on the spot when Murphy and two scout cars responded to a call from a woman who complained a man was breaking into her second-floor apartment in the 3700 block of Jay st. ne. Murphy said Gordon and the woman had been friends but she no longer wanted to see him.

When the woman refused to press a criminal charge, the captain relieved Gordon of his badge and revolver and took him before Assistant District Attorney J. Warren Wilson. Gordon was ordered to trial on a charge of conduct unbecoming an officer.

Church Drive Passes Half-Million Mark

New York Avenue Presbyterian Church last night crossed the half-million-dollar mark in its drive for $800,000 to build a new church on the present site at 1301 New York ave. nw. Campaign workers announced at a report dinner at the church that $527,932 has been pledged to date. The final report dinner will be held on December 2. The drive for funds opened October 11.

18-Year Romance Wilts in 2-Month Marriage

How a walk one April day in Franklin Park ripened 18 years later into his marriage of only two months' duration was described yesterday in District Court by Allen W. Kelley, 69, a real estate firm employe.

His wife, Mozelle Wellorn Kelley, 42, a part-time beautician at the Kennedy-Warren, is suing him for maintenance. She contends that Kelley would rather eat with a "domestic" than with her. She says also that he once threw a beer bottle at her and told her to sell papers for her support.

Kelley, who works at the P. J. Walshe real estate office, countersued for an annulment, contending that his younger wife and he never consummated the marriage and that she married him under fraudulent circumstances after hurrying him into it.

The Kelleys, who were married in Baltimore in April, separated in June.

Kelley took the witness stand yesterday before Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

The witnesses said that when they met in the park, they shared a bench together and that for years he saw her twice a week.

All this time, said Kelley, she was asking him to marry her, but Kelley said he refused. He recalled that the beautician treated his face with creams for a time, but that all ended after the marriage.

He said he was surprised in January to find that Mrs. Kelly's furniture was outside his house at 700 Randolph st. nw. Her insistence on marriage became even greater then, he said, and the nuptials were held, after she said "she only wanted my name."

They spent their wedding night in separate rooms, he said. He raised no objection at the time, he said, because "I always thought we had plenty of time."

Kelley admitted, however, that he had loved the woman and had bought her a wedding ring and a "ring with a small diamond in it."

Court Dismisses Suit for Arrest Against Detective

A $10,000 false arrest and imprisonment suit against Precinct Detective Clarence Winemiller was dismissed yesterday in District Court.

The dismissal was by direction of Judge James Alger Fee of Portland, Oreg. At the time of the trial, Fee was a visiting judge here.

The suit was brought by two brothers, Carlisle and Albert Cherry of 507 2d st. nw. They were arrested shortly after a liquor store at 123 G st. nw. was robbed, were released in a short time and never were charged.

Judge Fee ruled the officer was justified in making the arrest because a felony had been committed and he had reasonable grounds to believe the Cherry brothers might be responsible.

2 Banks Close Up And Forget to Lock

Two Alexandria banks, a block and a half apart on King st., were left unlocked Saturday night, it was learned yesterday. Officials happily reported nothing missing from either bank.

Checking an anonymous phone call received at 6:15 p. m., police said they found the front door to the First National Bank, 507 King st., unlocked.

About midnight, police found that the Alexandria National Bank at King and Royal sts. was also unlocked. Negligent employes were blamed in both instances.

The First National Bank was the scene of a $27,000 theft in June, 1947, for which a former janitor, David Briggs, was convicted and sentenced to eight years.

Arson Suspect Cleared

Clyde R. Eanes 21, 6720 MacArthur blvd., Glen Echo, yesterday was found innocent in Montgomery County Circuit Court of setting fire to a house at 6717 MacArthur blvd., which burned to the ground. The arson charge grew out of a complaint by Mrs. Sarah Higby, occupant, that Eanes fired the house in spite because he believed Mrs. Higby had stolen $15 from him.

Police Rescue Dog

A small wire-haired terrier, weakly trying to climb out of the Washington Channel, was rescued in the nick of time yesterday by two harbor police returning from patrol.

Postal Employe Held

An Alexandria Postoffice employe was held for Federal court action yesterday, charged with embezzling a letter and taking $10 from it.

James R. Callis, 27, of 4918 Chesterfield rd., Arlington, waived preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Stanley King in Alexandria and was released on $500 cash bond. The case probably will be considered in the December term of Alexandria District Court.

Two Guilty in Fire Thefts

Grover Baker, jr., 20, Germantown, Md., and James Riley, 19, Rockville, Md., were convicted yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court of larceny as a result of tire thefts from Rockville filling stations and garages. Jesse B. Floyd, jr., 22, Washington Grove, was convicted of receiving stolen goods. Sentence was deferred.

Welsh Picked For Post in Prince Georges

T. Hammond Welsh, sr., of Hyattsville, Md., was nominated to fill a vacancy on the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners yesterday by the county's Democratic State Central Committee.

Welsh

The committee asked Governor William Preston Lane in a letter to appoint Welsh to serve out the unexpired term of Commissioner William A. Carson, who died October 14. The four-year term runs through 1950. Such recommendations by the committee are generally followed.

Welsh started as a clerk with the Hyattsville Building and Loan Association 38 years ago and has been its president the last 10 years. He is vice chairman of the advisory board to the county commissioners set up some years ago to recommend suburban area improvements such as street lights and road work.

Born in Aquasco, Prince Georges County, Welsh was mayor of Hyattsville in 1920-21, served several terms on the town council, and is a director and former president of Maryland League of Building Associations. He once served in the Forestry Service and was a regional director of the Federal Home Loan Bank at Winston-Salem, N. C.

D. C. Woman Hurt In Wyoming as Bus Leaves Road

A Washington woman returning home from the West Coast for Thanksgiving was one of seven persons hospitalized in Wyoming yesterday as the aftermath of a bus accident.

Mrs. Anne Noble, 52, of 2647 41st st. nw., was injured when a Greyhound bus ran off the road 23 miles east of Laramie, Wyo., Monday night in a blizzard.

Mrs. Noble, taken to a Cheyenne hospital, was not believed seriously hurt, according to relatives here.

They said she had been working for about six months in a fashion shop in San Francisco. Previously, she had worked as a fitter at Jelleff's here.

Group Backs Hyattsville Bond Issue

The Hyattsville Municipal Planning Committee last night agreed to recommend to the mayor and council a $100,000 bond issue for a new fire house.

Cost of construction is estimated at about $77,000. The bond issue would cover purchase of land, and a piece of equipment. The location is Queens Chapel rd. and Oglethorpe st.

The committee also decided to recommend purchase of the gas company building in Hyattsville for use as a municipal center. Mayor Caesar L. Aiello told the committee the structure could be bought for $21,000 out of present city funds.

In another action, the group moved to suggest to the council that a survey of parking needs and business district street improvements be made before any program is launched.

The committee also proposed that the council support efforts of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission in the State Legislature to get an extensive recreation program for Prince Georges County. This would include construction of recreation centers and four swimming pools, one in Hyattsville, according to the committee's recommendation.

Approximately 75 persons attended the meeting at the County Service Building and engaged in a three-hour discussion.

Barrett Asks Municipal Center Sandwich Shop

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett yesterday asked the District Commissioners to assign Room 136 in the Municipal Center basement as space for a sandwich shop.

Major Barrett pointed out that within a short time the Municipal Center, in which police headquarters and other District agencies are situated will have no cafeteria or lunchroom facilities, other than a small stand on the second floor operated under auspices of the Washington Association for the Blind.

The Commissioners, on October 27, ordered the operator of the cafeteria, Mrs. Zada F. Daniels, 2480 16th st. nw., to close down within 30 days. Their decision followed months of complaints by District and Federal officials that the cafeteria was existing rent free without a license, and in violation of certain Health Department regulations.

Educational Facilities Urged for Handicapped

Immediate steps should be taken by Montgomery County officials to provide educational facilities for handicapped children unable to attend public schools, the county legislative delegation declared yesterday.

After meeting with the county's cerebral palsy committee, the county legislators expressed "deep sympathy" for such a move. Chairman Anders R. Lofstrand, jr., of the delegation, said $200 per pupil would be provided in State aid if such a program were instituted.

A U. S. Public Health Service demonstration unit which is touring Virginia will move into Alexandria from Arlington Monday to treat students at Maury and Lyles-Crouch Schools.

State Enlistment Ceilings Lifted by National Guard

The National Guard lifted ceilings yesterday on State enlistments, giving a free rein to recruiting programs over the Nation.

Strength of the Guard is now 302,000. Its budget ceiling strength is 341,000. If that total is reached, a recruiting ban—first imposed last summer when youths sought draft exemption through membership in the Guard—will be renewed.

The District National Guard was authorized Monday to recruit members up to its full strength of 4070 officers and men. Present membership is 2736 men including 248 officers and 2448 enlisted men.

In Virginia, the latest report showed actual strength to be 4564 officers and men. The ceiling had been set at 4168.

A Guard spokesman explained that certain States were able to exceed their quotas through transfer of funds and because of shortages in training facilities and enlistments in other areas.

In Maryland, actual strength was last reported at 4354 officers and men, only 135 short of the ceiling set at 4689.

Man Who Has Been True to Wife, With Keen Sense of Loyalty, Now Deeply Loves More Compatible Woman and Ponders His Dilemma

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife Beth, to whom I have been married for 10 years, has many good qualities; but we have few interests in common and aren't sexually compatible.

I have been true to her, with a keen sense of loyalty, but I have wanted children and she has no desire for them, and this has been a great disappointment to me.

Now I am in love, desperately in love, with another woman of equally fine quality—I'll call her Julia—and she has two children whom I adore. Her companionship supplies many of the good things in life that I have craved. The future without her seems unbearable, and yet I fear the shame and criticism of divorce.

Torn Between Duty and Love

IN SUCH circumstances, what is a man to do? Should I ask Beth for my freedom, thereby choosing happiness for myself and the woman I truly love? Or should I stay in the traces, technically faithful to the vows we pledged, trying to give Beth the little happiness I can, meanwhile harboring resentment against her, as the empty years recede?

Am I to believe that this society of ours cruelly demands that I stay married to Beth, when it means forfeiting the only real love and companionship I have ever known, and that I can never be truly happy with her? I am in a quandary, pondering these questions, and will appreciate your plainspoken views. R. C.

Christian Marriage Has Two Objectives

DEAR R. C.: This society of ours is predominantly Christian and civilized, or at any rate it strives to merit that description; and according to its view, marrage has two main purposes: firstly, to produce children and safeguard their welfare until they attain self-governing age; secondly, to afford privacy and opportunity, with society's blessing, for the enjoyment and development of profound intimacy between man and mate.

When these two purposes are substantially achieved in happy blend, to the deepening satisfaction of the contracting parties, approximately ideal marriage has been established in force and effect, and only death can dissolve that union, which by its fruits has subtly enriched the surrounding society.

At the other end of the scale, however, is barren meaningless so-called marriage such as yours, which—once the initiating factor of infatuation has waned—seems to have no reason for being, aside from providing support (economic or emotional) to a parasitic wife, who requires her husband to be her father-protector, and guardedly trains him to make no mate-type demands upon her.

Man Is Stymied by His Character

SUCH a wife may be "faithful," thrifty, a fine cook and housekeeper, a gracious hostess and welcome guest in the homes of friends, active in church work, etc., but if she holds her husband at arm's length emotionally, seems indifferent to his interests for the most part, and discourages (or declines to oblige) his desire for children, she is an imposter in the position she occupies, perpetrating a fraud upon the man and upon all who esteem her a "good" helpmeet.

A man thus fooled and exploited, thus frustrated and cheated of forms of expression and fulfillment indigenous to the nature of real marriage, surely is a justified candidate for divorce, in my opinion. To quit that whited sepulcher relationship, in quest of a more abundant life, graced with children, mutual sympathetic mate-love and a shared community of social interests, would be a constructive step, it seems to me.

However, I am speaking in general terms, and my advice is to let your conscience be your guide. You couldn't be happy married to Julia if your soul were burdened by uneasy self-reproach at leaving Beth; and I rather think an ineradicable sense of duty to Beth is holding you now, and always will stand between you and Julia. It is this you resent, more than Beth herself; so don't make Beth the goat, unnecessarily, for your particular cast of character. M. H.

Don't Choose Between, Choose Both These Pies

WILL IT BE pumpkin or mincemeat pie this Thanksgiving? Or maybe a little of both?

A lot of families, including President Truman's, like to serve both, so you can take your choice or have slender slices of each on your plate.

Pumpkin Chiffon Pie

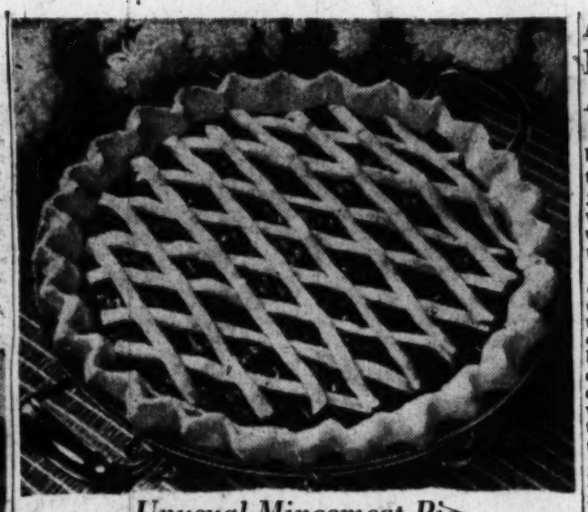
3 eggs, separated
½ cup sugar
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1 envelope (1 tablespoon) plain gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ cup sugar
Gingersnap Crust (9-inch)

Cook pumpkin in top of double boiler over boiling water 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Mix together egg yolks, sugar, and milk. Add to pumpkin with salt, spices and melted butter. Stir and cook until of custard consistency (about 15 minutes.) Remove from heat. Soften gelatin in cold water and add to hot mixture, stirring until dissolved. Chill. When mixture begins to stiffen, beat egg whites stiff, gradually adding ½ cup sugar. Fold into pumpkin mixture.

Pour into a gingersnap crumb crust, made as follows: Put 22 gingersnaps (the ready-made kind) in a clean paper bag, twist end closed, and crush gingersnaps with rolling pin pressure on top of bag. Pour crumbs into bowl and add ¼ cup softened butter or margarine and ¼ cup sugar. Blend well. Press mixture firmly into an even layer on bottom and sides of piepan. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) 8 minutes. Let cool before pouring in pumpkin mixture. Chill pie in refrigerator until firm. Decorate with whipped cream.



Unusual Mincemeat Pie

1 8-inch pie shell, baked
1 9-ounce package dried mincemeat
1½ cups water
1 to 3 tablespoons sugar
2 (3 ounce) packages cream cheese
3 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon orange rind
½ teaspoon lemon rind

Break mincemeat into small pieces. Add water and sugar. Place over medium heat and stir until all lumps are thoroughly broken. Briskly boil for 3 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool. Pour mincemeat into cooled pie shell. Soften cream cheese at room temperature. Mash cheese and gradually stir in orange juice. Then add sugar, orange and lemon rinds, and cream until smooth. Lightly pile cheese mixture on mincemeat filling. Chill until ready to serve.

Rare Items for Pinhoe Bazaar

A handsome eighteenth century Sheffield dressing table mirror, one of the largest silver cocktail shakers that ever graced a bar, a Queen Anne silver gravy boat, Steuben and Berley crystal pieces, Spode plates and a pair of Sevres vases, Anno 1777, painted by Boucot, are but a few of the priceless antiques to be on sale at the Pinhoe Bazaar in the British Embassy, Wednesday, December 1.

Mrs. William Mason Wright and members of her committee have scoured the town for contributions for their Caledonian Market. And Mrs. George Lloyd, headmistress of Mount Vernon Seminary and wife of President Lloyd, sent out an appeal which is bringing returns.

Steering the bazaar behind the scenes is capable Mrs. Sidney de la Rue, member of the Washington committee for the Pinhoe Community Center Fund. She has appointed committees, supervised the mailing of 10,000 invitations, gone on scouting expeditions to New York to garner wares for the benefit and, because of her deep personal interest in Pinhoe, hopes to realize a substantial fund for the child health center there.

Tract 48, Other Problems Discussed by D.C. Women Voters

THE POSSIBILITY of improving housing conditions in District Tract 48, which extends from Florida ave. to New York ave., and from New Jersey ave. to Georgia ave. nw., was discussed yesterday morning at a joint meeting of the civil rights and District affairs committees of the District League of Women Voters.

In a report read by Mrs. Helen D. Hoffman, president of the D. C. Legislative Council, it was pointed out that the overcrowded area puts a very heavy burden on the community in matters of police and fire protection, etc., and that a very large proportion of the delinquent children and adult prisoners in the District come from Tract 48.

A major difficulty in improving conditions in the area arises from the fact that since there is no other housing for these people to occupy, the city is reluctant to force them to move out of insanitary and substandard buildings.

THE Police Department's responsibility to charge its prisoners immediately, and the unlawfulness of holding a person for investigation, were discussed following a review of similar material in the D. C. Bar Association Journal, by Mrs. Henry W. Edgerton.

The civil rights committee of the league will meet again December 7. Members have been urged to read some of the following material which deals with the President's loyalty program and related issues.

"Turning on the Light," a collection of 12 editorials from The Washington Post; "Our Uncertain Liberties," published by the Civil Liberties Union; a summary of the work of the Un-American Activities Committee, by A. J. Liebling in the November 13 issue of the New Yorker; "Who Is Loyal to America," an article by Henry Steele Commanger in the September, '47, Harper's, and Thurman Arnold's "How Not to Be Investigated," in the November, '48, Harper's.

Medical Unit To Feature Talk By Dr. Gruber

Dr. Ruth Gruber, will give an eyewitness account of conditions in Israel at the Hadassah Medical Organization "chai" (Life) Luncheon of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah at the Hotel Mayflower on Monday, November 29, at 12:30 p. m.

Dr. Gruber, a correspondent for the New York Herald-Tribune just returned from an assignment in Israel, and author of the recent best-seller, "Destination Palestine," will be the guest of honor and principal speaker at the luncheon.

Mrs. Joseph Freedman, president of the Washington chapter, will welcome the guests to the luncheon, and Rabbi Isidore Breslay will pronounce the invocation and dedication. Dr Gruber will be introduced by Mrs. Raphael Tourover, national board adviser for the Hadassah Medical Organization, and Mrs. Cecil Kaufman, chairman of the luncheon, will preside.

Mrs. Kaufman, explaining the Hebrew word "chai" signified both "life" and the number "18," said it was chosen as the name for the luncheon since those attending will contribute $18 to assure life for the people of Israel through the work of the Hadassah Medical Organization. November 29, the date of the luncheon, commemorates the first anniversary of the adoption by the United Nations Assembly of the resolution providing for the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine.

Hadassah's program in Israel, which will be supported by funds raised through this luncheon, Mrs. Kaufman said, calls for rebuilding of the Hadassah Hospital in Jerusalem, the building of a new hospital in Negev, providing medical care for the immigrants now entering Israel at the rate of 10,000 a month and medical and rehibilitation treatment for the wounded. Double amputees and totally blind victims of the war have been brought to the United States for treatment.

Mrs. Kaufman's committee for the luncheon includes Mrs. Alexander Hassan, cochairman; Mrs. Morris Gewirz, chairman of hostesses; Mrs. Theodore Shapiro, chairman of ushers; Mrs. Jack Kotz, chairman of arrangements; Mrs. Harry Burka, Mrs. Aaron Schlossberg, Mrs. I. S. Burka, Mrs. Aaron Heller, Mrs. Morris Krucoff, Mrs. David Cohen and Mrs. Raymond Martin, group chairmen.

Thoughtful Giving

Children appreciate thoughtfulness on the part of their parents. Such a statement sounds rather queer. We don't stop to think that parents should be particularly thoughtful as far as children are concerned. Too often we take our youngsters for granted.

One of the ways in which thoughtfulness can be concretely shown is in the things we get for youngsters, the little gifts we select. Child or adult will appreciate an inexpensive gift that shows real consideration much more than something expensive that doesn't fit.

If you go out of your way to get some wished-for stamps that your son wants for his growing collection or if you remember to have friends send you a carved animal or two from abroad because you know they will be welcome additions to Susy's growing menagerie, your thoughtfulness will be appreciated almost as much as the stamps or the animals.

Even saving a newspaper clipping of something on jet-propelled planes in which you know Jim is interested is a clear indication to the youngster that you are thinking of him and his interests. And that is something he appreciates above all else.

Removing Stains From Damask Mat

How can I get grey, greaselike stains out of a yellow damask place mat? M. B. C.

If the stains are, indeed, grease, you should be able to remove them with dry cleaning fluid or by washing in hot soapsuds. If they prove stubborn, rub petroleum jelly or lard in them, and let stand overnight. Then use the cleaning fluid or wash thoroughly. If stains still refuse to budge, you may have to resort to a bleach. Sodium perborate is a mild one. Rub powder into dampened stain. Let stand a minute or two, then rinse.

I have a rubberized bathinette which has become soiled. Can you tell me what to use to clean it? P. D.

Dust a scratchless kitchen cleansing powder onto a soft cloth and rub the rubber surface with it. This should cut the soil readily so that it can be washed away with soap and water. Rinse thoroughly.

How do I get lipstick marks out of a linen coat? P. D.

Work clean petroleum jelly into the stain to soften. Rub between fingers to work it into the stain, then sponge with carbon tetrachloride to remove the grease and the lipstick with it. If some color remains when all grease is gone, sponge with denatured alcohol.

Can you tell me how to take grease and oil spots out of table linen (cotton, linen, etc.?) I have trouble especially with table napkins, which I usually wash by hand. I often soak them overnight in a powdered soap solution, but when they are washed and ironed, the grease spots still remain. I know about pressing grease spots against blotters, but that seems like a great deal of time for all a week's linens. M. S.

Sponging the spots with carbon tetrachloride before they are washed should loosen the grease enough so that it will come out readily in the wash. Sometimes grease spots do not come out in washing because the water is not hot enough to dissolve it. That would be especially true when washing by hand and could even be true in machine washing if very hot water is not used.

We have a beautifully mounted 7-foot sailfish, also a bullhead (male) dolphin about 3½ feet. Both of these are on a base for hanging and the mounting was done by Pfleuger of Florida, who is regarded as an expert. They are in separate crates and could be shipped from Wheeling, W. Va., immediately. Would you advise where I may be able to dispose of these two beautifully mounted fish? A. E.

The American Wildlife Studio, located at 1236 Raum st. ne., in Washington may be able to sell the mountings for you. However, the studio advises that there is no great demand for such mountings and suggests that you state the lowest price which will be acceptable to you when you write them.

Can you tell me where I might get floor screens, about 6 feet high (the kind used to block off part of a room), inexpensively? I thought something made of bamboo or second-hand ones that we could cover might be cheaper. M. T.

I am told that some of the firms which are listed under "Furniture-Used" in the telephone book occasionally have used floor screens. I would suggest you call several of these firms, telling them the sort of screen you want. Perhaps they would notify you when they have a screen available.

I am interested in making some curtains of plastic material and would like to paint a design and contrasting border. Will ordinary enamel do the trick, or will the paint peel or the plastic harden and crack? I. H. W.

Use artists oil paints which come in small tubes to paint the designs. These are sold in many paint stores which also sell artists paints. Mix the paint as it comes from the tubes with a little turpentine. Do this on a sheet of glass or flat plate. Take care not to apply the paint too thickly and it will not crack.

I enjoy very much making baby garments. Can you give me the names of some stores that buy hand-made articles for resale? L. H. W.

There is a shop on 39th st. which can be reached by calling Emerson 1484, which sells hand made articles for its customers. A shop on Old Georgetown rd. is also now selling hand-made articles on consignment as Christmas gifts. Its telephone is Oliver 6063.

I have been given enough wool material to make a skirt if I cut it crosswise of the material instead of properly up and down of the cloth. Would the skirt fit and wear all right made in this manner? E. C. K.

It should make no difference which way the pattern is laid on the material if it is 100 per cent wool. If you do not know whether or not the material is all wool, ravel it out at a corner and first burn a lengthwise thread and then one running across the width. If they burn exactly the same, you are safe in assuming that both threads are of the same fiber.

Indian Embassy Visitor

Busy Vincent Sheean Here Just Long Enough To Pass on a Good Story

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

AUTHOR JAMES VINCENT SHEEAN, who has shed 56 pounds, finished another novel and is about to plunge into India to scribble for Holiday magazine, lighted in Washington briefly as the guest of the Indian Embassy's Information Colonel Nyar and his charming wife. Munching slices of peppery lotus stems, Jimmy regaled an audience with this and that, including a series of ripostes credited to his erstwhile hostess, Dorothy Thompson, and her distinguished British sidekick, Rebecca West. When Miss West was here to cover the political conventions she visited her pal's New England farm, where Sheean was sweating out his novel. The two ladies whose literary efforts stick to such a high plane were indulging in personalities, just as more ordinary mortals. Clare Boothe Luce was their principal target. The Luce youthful hairdo and sartorial effects invoked special scorn. "Why," said Miss T., tartly, "she was gotten up like a teen-ager!" "Not a teen-ager, dear," corrected Miss West sweetly, "you mean she was gotten up in a christening robe!"

It's a rotating job, given each year to a different talented poet. Last year's incumbent was Boston's youthful Robert Lowell. Leonie Adams is Mrs. William Troy in private life, a Barnard graduate, received a Guggenheim traveling scholarship some time back. Among her more recent works is "High Falcon," a book of poems, and a fine translation of Francois Villon's poems. Around the library, the most interesting facet of her work is the compilation of recordings made by poets reading their own works. The first in a series of albums will soon be ready. Her other tasks include answering mail inquiries dealing with poetry, making suggestions for adding contemporary poetry, reading innumerable small magazines and contributions to the library's poetry bibliography. Earlier poetry consultants have authored such works as "Twentieth Century American Poets." Miss Adams' husband, who commutes between the Capital and New York, lectures at the new School of Social Research on contemporary literature.

Ariburuns, Spurgeons Feted At Gay Farewell Parties

By Marie McNair

FAREWELLS were said in the happiest sort of way yesterday at the cocktail party given by Mr. and Mrs. Codnelius B. Bretsch for the Military and Naval Air Attache of the Turkish Embassy, Col. Tekin Ariburun, and Mme. Ariburun, who are to leave in a few days for home.

Undoubtedly Mme. Ariburun will take back with her many messages from Mrs. Bretsch, who was Princess Emina Toussoun of Egypt, long a warm friend of Mme. Ariburun's kin. The Bretschs' house in Georgetown is filled with handsome bibelots and furnishings. The beautiful rugs which carpet every room in the house were all brought with her from her home in Egypt. In the drawing room, panels of pale gray and deep ivory silk hangings conceal the windows, with a tracery of cerise bordering the cornices. There are deep-seated sofas in silver gray, others in deep maroon and plump chairs covered in ivory satin.

Hostess in Brown

Mrs. Bretsch wore brown satin yesterday, the skirt touching the floor, the entire gown embroidered in circlets of white beads. Sparkling diamond clips held the square neckline and she wore several strands of pearls.

Tiny Mme. Ariburun, who wore her dark hair drawn back closely into a knot, was in a soft gray satin gown made with the new back flare and empire waistline and a bodice of gray lace.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin came to salute The Ariburuns and their hosts. Capt. and Mrs. Valentine Pottle were in a group which included Mrs. Robert W. Imbrie, whose memories of Turkey go back to post World War I days when she did a tremendous job in Near East relief. Admiral and Mrs. Thomas Inglis joined up on the Navy's side, and arriving at the same time were Gen. Richard Cutts and Mrs. Cutts and Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Norris wearing a plumed hat in saffron color tipped in blue to match the gold figures in her blue satin frock.

At the Buffet

I saw Mrs. Harold Walker succumbing to the hams and turkey on the buffet table, and others gathered about for a snack and a drink were Mme. Poulieff, Mrs. Sidney Graves, Mrs. Lee Murphy in a Cossack hat of fluffy ostrich; Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. George Vournas, Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg and Mrs. Tom Blake in a new black velvet costume for her friends to see.

Judge George Neilson and Mrs. Neilson came in on their way to the Philadelphia Orchestra concert, Mrs. Neilson in a lovely gown of cream colored taffeta made with a bouffant skirt.

Others were Mme. Weisse, Mrs. English Gordon and William Jenkins who had been first to Leila Gordon Dickey's fashion show and tea; Mrs. Pearson Rust, Brig. D. Chaudhuri, Military and Air Attache of the Indian Embassy, with Mme. Chaudhuri who wore a gray sari bordered in orchid and silver lame; Mrs. William T. Mann, wearing her black Paris frock and hat.

ONE OF THE pleasantest of a number of farewell parties given the retiring Naval Attache of the Australian Embassy, Capt. S. H. K. Spurgeon and Mrs. Spurgeon, was the reception yesterday afternoon given by the Australian Ambassador and Mrs. Norman O. Makin.

The more than 100 guests—most of them from the military—also had opportunity to greet Captain Spurgeon's successor, Capt. J. C. Morrow, and Mrs. Morrow, who have just arrived.

The Secretary of Defense and Mrs. James Forrestal were invited, and also Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Louis Denfeld, the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, the Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. W. John Kenney, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air and Mrs. John Nicholas Brown.

Others who had been asked were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Earl E. Stone, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Earle W. Mills, Rear Admiral and Mrs. A. G. Noble, Vice Admiral and Mrs. Robert B. Carney, Vice Admiral and Mrs. John D. Price, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Glenn B. Davis, Capt. and Mrs. Robert L. Dennison, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. J. A. Chapman, Rear Admiral and Mrs. T. B. Inglis, Admiral Sir Frederick and Lady Dalrymple-Hamilton, Rear Admiral and Mrs. T. A. Solberg, Air Commodore and Mrs. J. L. Findlay, Rear Admiral and Senora de Jurado, Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Eugeni Glinkov, Capt. and Mrs. G. A. Sinclair.

Senator and Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall, and Lady Maitland Wilson, with her daughter, Miss Maitland Wilson were others among those saying farewell to the Spurgeons.

MRS. ROBERT E. LEE entertained Gen. and Mrs. A. C. McAuliffe and Capt. and Mrs. Atherton Macondray at dinner last evening taking them later to her box at Constitution Hall for the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra concert.

Trumans Plan Quiet Thanksgiving

Inaugural Day Reception To Be Held at Art Gallery

THE PRESIDENT and Mrs. Truman will receive in the National Gallery of Art on Inaugural Day. The function may take place in the marble rotunda, or in a smaller gallery on the ground floor. It is the first time in many years that no inauguration luncheon will be held, as the White House is closed for repairs, and Blair House, where the President now resides, is too small for large gatherings.

Thanksgiving Day in the Truman family will be observed quietly. The President and his family will probably attend church services in the morning, and they will have dinner at Blair House with Mrs. Truman's mother, Mrs. D. W. Wallace. The latter is making an extended visit with the First Family.

At Mrs. Truman's press onference yesterday Mrs. Helm said any plans for Miss Truman's career would be announced at a later date. "Margaret will want to make any announcements herself," she added. Although her mother never attends a press conference, Margaret enjoys it.

Meanwhile, the President's daughter has her time well occupied with social engagements. She will attend the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia this weekend with her mother and father, and she may attend the opening of the Metropolitan Opera in New York on Monday evening.

A major event on the White House schedule is the reception the President and Mrs. Truman will hold today for delegates attending the fourth session of the Conference of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the U. N. The reception will take place in the Terrace Banquet Room of the Shoreham Hotel at 5 o'clock. Preceding the reception, the President will address a plenary session of the FAO at 4:30 o'clock.

Vandenbergs to Hear Pianist Daughter In N. Y. Recital

Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg will go to New York on Thursday to attend a piano concert to be given by their daughter, Elizabeth Vandenberg Pfeiffer, on Friday evening at the Huntington Museum on Long Island, sponsored by the Women's Club of Huntington. Myron Sands, baritone, will also be on the program.

Betty Vandenberg, now Mrs. Edward J. Pfeiffer, will be guest of honor at a reception following her recital to be given by Mrs. John J. Trask.

Also at the concert will be Senator and Mrs. Vandenberg's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Bailey, who are coming from Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. Bailey is the former Miss Barbara Vandenberg. While in the East they will also see their son John, a student at the Hill School.

Senator Vandenberg will stay over the weekend, but Mrs. Vandenberg will remain a few days longer.

Leschins Family Returns From South America

Mrs. Edith Leschin and her daughters, the Misses Joana and Louise Leschin have returned from six months in South America and are at their Hotel 2400 apartment.

Duo pianists, the Misses Leschin have made three concert tours of South America and have played in the Presidential Palace of Honduras at the invitation of President Carias.

FAO Delegates Honor Guests At Swiss Party

FOR cocktails yesterday FAO delegates were invited to the home of the Swiss Counselor and Mme. Fuchss. Around 100 guests dropped by between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock. A welcoming fire blazed in the blue-walled drawing room, and in the dining room a buffet offered Swiss wines and hors d'oeuvres.

Assisting their mother at the party were the two fair-haired daughters of the host and hostess, Cecile, 11, and Adelaide, 10. Among the guests were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann, the Belgian Minister, Paul Kronacher, Count de Penha Garcia of Portugal, the Portuguese Counselor and Senora de Rocheta, Mr. and Mrs. Neville Gardiner and Professor Blink of the Netherlands.

The Swiss Princess, Miss Ursula Rudolph, who will represent her country at the Birmingham Carnival today, was not at the party. She and pricesses from other countries left by plane for Birmingham at 7 o'clock this morning.

Among other guests at the party were the Spanish Agricultural Attache and Senora de Echegaray, Mr. and Mrs. John Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Boals and Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelm Goertz of the Austrian Legation.

Movies a Kindly Eyeful, Says Doc

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE THITTAH: Dr. Elmer M. Soles, of the American Optometric Association—eye doc, to get down to earth—pops up in the movie news for a surprising reason . . . "Going to the movies may be good for your vision," says the Pittsburgh eye man, which is a far cry from the things grandma used to hear when she first went to the flicks . . . Remember how people used to complain they couldn't go to the movies because they were afraid of hurting their eyes? . . . You don't? . . . Well, you must be a mere cheeild . . . But, anyhoo, Dr. Soles is all milk and honey for the movies and he even recommends them as "an aid to correction of some visual problems" . . . Following motion on the screen, he says, "helps develop quick perception, one of the objectives of scientific visual training. Adaptation to varying degrees of light intensity on the screen and in the theater may also be beneficial to those who suffer from night blindness, one of the serious hazards of automobile driving." . . . Dr. Soles also points out that if movie going gives you a headache you should check on your eyes and be certain that if you wear glasses they're the right sort . . . Wouldn't Tom Edison have been delighted with this scientific approval?

. . THE FOLGER LIBRARY'S fascinating miniature theater will be used as a theater for the first time next spring, for which congratulations are due the library's new director, Dr. Louis B. Wright, and the Masquers of Amherst College . . . Prof. F. Curtis Canfield, chairman of the Massachusetts college's dramatics department, announces that the play will be "Julius Caesar," with a cast and crew of 50 Amherst students . . . The Amherst angle is a natural, for the Folger was founded by Henry Clay Folger, class of '79, and the trustees of Amherst administer the library . . . This event at the end of March has been long awaited, for the tiny stage has never been used for plays since the day the library opened 16 years ago . . . One reason of course, is the limited size of the auditorium; only 270 seats give a full view of the stage . . . How to get seats for this imaginative evening will be announced later . . . Amherst alumni will attend the first of five performances, but how the public will be able to purchase seats for the remaining four has yet to be decided . . . It's not easy.

BRETAIGNE WINDUST has been succeeded as director of "Anne of the Thousand Days" by H. C. Potter, behind which lies one of those stories that the theater seldom believes . . . Reason for the Windust withdrawal from the Maxwell Anderson play about Henry VII and Anne Boleyn (which opens a week's stay at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, Monday night) is illness . . . The director was sick even before the Philadelphia three-week tryout began, but so often has that excuse been used for withdrawals in the past, the Playwrights Company's Walter Alford emphasizes, that the producing group and Windust have no quarrel, as hinted by some columnists . . . Mr. Potter's been in Hollywood lately; his last stage assignment was "A Bell for Adano," which received the Drama Critics Circle award . . . Windust's latest Hollywood effort was the Bette Davis-Robert Montgomery comedy, "June Bride."

JACK PARKER, who'll be juggling on the Capitol stage beginning tomorrow, is a Western High graduate who took to juggling even before he went to Gordon Junior High . . . When his folks lived in Georgetown, his dad used to be kept busy buying clubs, bats and balls for the embryo juggler . . . Jack also once reported for this newspaper—as an Eagle Scout he covered that Boy Scout Jamboree that had the lads camped all over the town . . . After serving in the South Pacific with the Army, Jack joined the USO and went out to Japan as an entertainer.

KATHERINE HALL, of G. W.'s upcoming "John Loves Mary," will be missing her first Army-Navy football game in years (when you're that young, three's a crowd) . . . The G. W. Players are roving the service hospitals with the Norman Krasna comedy before unveiling the show at Lisner Auditorium December 3, which puts Miss Hall at Walter Reed the day of the game . . . Katherine's the daughter of Col. and Mrs. F. R. Hall, 1503 30th st., so now you know on which side of the stadium she would have been sitting.

AIR FORCE UNIFORMS will glitter tonight at the Warner, where "Fighter Squadron" makes its Air Force Night . . . This special opening will begin at 8:30, with the Air Force Band, under Maj. George S. Howard, and the band's Glee Club, Robert Landers, director, will be on stage . . . In the audience will be a hundred pilots and members of the Fourth Fighter Squadron, now stationed at Andrew Field . . . Two former Eagle pilots are in the outfit, Capt. Vermont Garrison and Maj. Howard Hively . . . The "Fighter Squadron" opening cuts short the run of "Miss Tatlock's Millions," with that merry, zany comedy going on the screen for the last time at 5:45 . . . The theater will reopen at 7:45 for the gold braid-gold bar doings.

AND DANNY KAYE, TOO—Tommy Dorsey and his trombone join a fancy crew of musicianly types in "A Song Is Born," opening this morning at Keith's. Benny Goodman, Louis Armstrong, Charlie Barnet, Lionel Hampton, Mel Powell, the Golden Gate Quartet and the Page Cavanaugh Trio give out with the jam, while Danny Kaye will be on hand for the chuckles

All-Russian Programs Proves Disappointing in Selections

By Paul Hume

Eugene Ormandy and William Kapell together with the Philadelphia Orchestra presented an all-Russian program last night in Constitution Hall.

Without regard to the nation from which the music came, it was one of the most poverty stricken concerts (in scarcity of musical ideas) we have heard in seasons. When the most profound musical thought of an entire evening is contained in Tschaikowsky's Serenade for Strings, the rest of the program is indeed shallow stuff.

The Serenade was succeeded by Dimitri Shostakovich's latest symphony, his ninth. The evening closed with the Khatchaturian concerto. Philadelphia's strings are renowned. Their luster was undimmed in Tschaikowsky's polite suite, save for momentary raggedness in the first violins in the familiar waltz. Perhaps it's too familiar. Ormandy phrased the work with obvious affection. The nuances he draws from sixty-five string players are of great breadth and subtlety.

The symphony is clever, smart, at times witty, and almost worthless. Its best moments are drawn directly from the scherzo and slow movement of the same composer's much better first symphony.

The Khatchaturian concerto has hardly a melodic idea in it from beginning to end, and those it does present are habitually heard over protracted pedal points which strengthen the feeling of monotony. Its undeniable exciting power is due largely to the syncopated rhythms which mark the piano part, plus the amount of noise the composer achieves in his scoring.

Kapell is noted for his delineation of the work. His playing was as fine as ever last night, though the piano sounded more metallic than we like to hear. It is difficult to speak of Kapell in the fine way he deserves from such music.

Now: How about an entire program of American music from the Philadelphia Orchestra? They are annually faithful to Russia. There are better American symphonies, suites, and concertos than last night's. There are plenty of native works in every form which surpass too many European importations we hear these days. What is wrong with an all-American evening? After all, the hall is entirely sold out, so no money could be lost, even if Americans proved to lack interest in their own cultural heritage. We don't think they would. From Philadelphia should come better things than we heard last evening.

Five to Judge School Press Contest

The Montgomery County Board of Education yesterday announced appointment of five judges for the county-wide high school press contest to select an outstanding editorial, news story and cartoon on the subject of tuberculosis.

The contest in Montgomery County, which closes December 23, is part of a national junior and senior high school press project sponsored jointly by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association and the National Tuberculosis Association. The county judges include: Dr. John G. Ball, Bethesda, Md., physician; Roger B. Farquhar, a reporter with The Washington Post, John W. Coffman, jr., editor of the Takoma Journal and president of the Montgomery County Press Association, and Mrs. Elsie Haines, editor of the Montgomery County Sentinel.

Grants of $25 will be awarded to each of the two high school newspapers submitting the best articles.

Montgomery Boosts Welfare Payments

Federal Government assistance in three of the Montgomery County Welfare Board's five public assistance programs reached 33.2 per cent of the $21,555 welfare cost in October, a total increase of 3.2 per cent over the previous month, the board announced yesterday.

William E. Royer, director of the board, said Federal Government funds on October 1, started matching local and State funds for old age assistance, aid to dependent children and aid to the needy blind programs.

Boyer said the Federal share of costs increased from 56.5 per cent to 64.2 per cent of $7009 costs for old age assistance; 42.7 per cent to 47 per cent of $5116 cost for aid to dependent children, and 57.9 per cent to 65 per cent of $278 cost for aid to the County's needy blind. There are no Federal funds for the $1905 cost of general public assistance and the $7247 cost of foster care programs, Boyer added.

Resulting directly from increased Federal participation, Boyer announced that the Welfare Board was able to increase average grants in October, from $30.23 to $32.60, for old age assistance; $66.51 to $78.60, for aid to dependent children; from $28.97 to $31 for aid to the needy blind; $25.93 to $28.87 for general public assistance, and $39.65 to $43.92 for foster care.

'Gadget Age'

Critics Find Man Ignores Need of Art

Six art experts agreed last night that art is a "basic need of society," but how to get society to take it—that was the question.

The six made up the discussion panel at an art forum sponsored by the American Veterans Committee at the AVC Clubhouse at 1751 New Hampshire ave. nw.

Pietro Lazzari, artist and sculptor and one panel member, proposed making use "of a public relations man to bring the layman and the artist together and to create a desire for art."

John Palmer Leeper, Corcoran Gallery expert, suggested the need merely awaits artists to take advantage of the opportunities awaiting them.

Countering a claim that this is a gadget, not an art, age, Leeper pointed out that we have refrigerators, neckties, houses and streets, but asked if they were beautiful.

"Here in Washington," he asserted, "one must go a long way to find even a beautiful building."

Other speakers on the panel included Dr. James W. Herring, head of the Howard University art department; Leon Berkowitz of the Washington Work Shop; Dr. Raymond Stites, head of the education department of the National Gallery, and James H. Whyte, head of the Whyte Gallery.

Whyte called home decorators a "menace to artists," because, he said, they suggest arrangements and uses of art on a standardization basis, depriving individuals "of their courage of conviction" as to what they like to see artistically about their home.

Joseph G. Cowell of the National Art School was moderator.

County Goes Along on Swann Bid

The Prince Georges County Commissioners voted concurrence yesterday in acceptance by the State Roads Commission of a $50,993 bid of Eugene Chaney of Upper Marlboro for construction of Swann rd. from Suitland rd. to Military hwy., Suitland.

Meeting at Upper Marlboro, the commissioners opened bids for storm drainage and street construction in Englewood and North Englewood, Special Improvement District 28. Sidney R. Johnston at Arlington, Va., was low bidder at $54,241.70, which County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman said was in line with his estimates. The board now will seek approval of residents in the area before awarding the contract.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. reported street lights in Boulevard Heights, Special Improvement District 31, should be completed and ready for use on December 15.

The commissioners appointed Clarence L. Tucker, Samuel O. Willett and Richard F. Brown a committee to determine if it is in the public interest to accept Broad rd. and Russell dr. from Palmer's Tavern rd. to Friendly rd., in the Friend Hills subdivision area, Piscataway District, as public roads.

Testimony Differs on Sloan Death

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

Conflicting medical testimony marked the opening of the murder trial of Anson Sloan, 39, in Circuit Court at Upper Marlboro yesterday.

Sloan is accused of fatally choking his wife, Florence, 42, in their Prince Georges County home last August 31.

Dr. Robert Hunter, jr., of 5600 New Hampshire ave. ne., who performed an autopsy on Mrs. Sloan's body after one performed by Dr. James P. Maloney and Dr. James I. Boyd, the county's medical examiners, declared death was caused by acute alcoholism plus a brain hemorrhage.

This was contrary to previous testimony by Dr. Boyd that the woman's death was due to a brain hemorrhage alone. Dr. Boyd told the jury of 10 men and 2 women that such a disturbance could have been caused by a slight blow or a fall.

The defense contends that Mrs. Sloan sustained her injuries when she fell while drunk and while her husband tried to carry her to a davenport.

Dr. Maloney testified that marks found on her throat "suggested choking." However, Dr. Boyd later testified that the marks could have been caused by a push.

Dr. Maloney's comments, which came as he described a number of small abrasions on the woman's arms, legs, face and throat, were ordered striken when defense counsel objected.

The Sloan's lived with their 6-year-old daughter at 403 Belford pl., Hampshire Knolls, Md.

The State rested its case following testimony from County Detective Earl J. Hubar, that Sloan had verbally admitted beating his wife in the past but not in the last four months. Huber admitted that Sloan had refused to sign a statement to that effect.

After Huber's testimony the trial was recessed until 10 a. m. today.

Prosecuting the case is State's Attorney J. Gwynn Bowie. Defense attorneys are Richard Earle, J. Dudley Digges and Frank Hall.

Survey Tells Husbands:

'Tis More Blessed to Give Furs and Video Receivers

Watch your blood pressure, fellows, the little woman thinks that a fur coat is a "practical" Christmas gift.

Other items on the list of "practical" gifts she would like to receive this year are lacy undies, luggage, television sets and electric sewing machines. These preferences were uncovered in a Nation-wide poll taken recently by the Woman's Home Companion.

Nearly half of the 2000 women polled said they want clothes for Christmas, and one type in particular. They want lacy and daring undies. One woman said: "I want a frilly matching gown and negligee for Christmas. Last year my husband gave me an alarm clock and an apron."

However, one woman checked the practical side of the ledger and evidently meant it. She said, "The nicest present I ever had was from a friend on Easter—a truckload of manure for my garden." But most of them seem to have more in common with the woman who after checking practical items for the house added, "but I have a yearning for jewelry, especially flashy earrings."

A Spartan Westerner replied, "At present price levels people are fools to indulge in luxury gifts." Her choice of the ideal Christmas gift—hold on to your hat, hubby—would be a matching alligator bag and shoes.

Yes, indeed, this year the better-half wants anything practical for Christmas, just so long as it looks, feels or smells like a million dollars.

Your Baby

Let Him Sit But Don't Force Him

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The baby's capacity to sit up or stand up does not develop at any particular age. Some babies have no difficulty in pulling themselves up to a sitting position on some one's lap when they are 4 or 5 months of age. Others of 7 or 8 months are quite content to lie down or exercise by merely rolling over.

The development is related both to the child's nutrition and to family patterns. The well-nourished child, unless overly fat and logy because of it, will be the one who makes the most strenuous effort to struggle into a sitting position early in the first year.

Help, If Needed

It is all right to give the baby a helping hand when he is straining to get up, but it is a mistake to anticipate his desires and force him into a sitting position. When he begins to lean sideways or tip forwerd he should have the privilege of being able to lie down, as he could not if he were bolstered with pillows.

Once he has learned to sit erect with back straight, he may be placed where he can pull himself up when he feels the urge. A playpen is a good place, as the flat surface and the helpful bars are his best aids in getting out of a supine position.

Something to Pull On

When he is able to pull himself to his feet he should be near sturdy tables or chairs which will not pull over on him. The play pen is again a good spot for this new adventure and he will surprise the parents with the ease with which he gets to his feet and stands there, weaving and wabbling but exhilarated by his prowess.

By 10 months a well baby should be able to pull himself to a sitting position, but he may appreciate some aid just at first.

Manthos made 150 arrests in eight months as plain clothes man. At a recent hearing before the Alcoholic Beverage Board of 57 charges against Mitchell's Grill, 235 G st. nw., he asserted a fellow plain clothes man who made the charges had admitted to him that they were trumped up. Both policemen and a third one who testified later were transferred to uniformed patrol duty.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Men of Landon Provide Bill With Two Items

Bill Kacy of the University of Virginia's Randall Hall lifts an eyebrow at this newspaper's recent report that Georgetown Prep was defeated by "Landon's 10-pound football team."

Bill says he attended Landon for 5 years, and doesn't recall any gridmen who ran quite that small.

(This story doesn't belong in a Pied Type item, but Bill reminds me that I sat opposite a Landon student at the Press Club's recent Father and Son Dinner, and got hit with: "Why is a dog's tail like the center of a tree?" The answer, I learned to my dismay, is: "Because they're both the farthest from the bark.")

Getting back to pie(eye)d type, Alan I. Cohen of 4306 Arkansas ave. nw., doubts the veracity of our reference to Slingin' Sam's age in the sentence:

"He equalled the mark set by Baugh in 943."

Paul A. Muse of the Manassas (Va.) Messenger keeps the football typos rolling with: ". . . . the Hoosiers' worst beating since Michigan rocked them, 3 to 0, in 1925."

And, for an error in a different sport, Charley Feller pounces on a sentence from our morning contemporary, which reported:

"Dawson went down the first time from what appeared to be a weak right-hand tap from Dawson."

"Cadillac 1940 Fleetwood model 60, 40-door sedan."

Patricia Thompson of 6925 Maple st. nw, forwards two pictures of the same fellow—one clipped from our morning contemporary and the other from an afternoon paper. In the morning the fellow is identified as a North Carolinian charged with bigamy but in the afternoon he's a local duckpin bowler.

And D. Harrison of 900 19th st. nw. reports that a Connecticut ave. restaurant is being offered for sale mighty cheap. A sign out front says:

"Complete diner, $2.25."

PERSONAL NOTES

Ruth Contract, 906 Gallatin st. nw.; Milton Weiss, National Bureau of Standards, and C. Warren Loveless, 4416 Harrison st. nw.: There's a simple explanation for the familiar typo "etaoin shrdlu" or its cousin, "shrdlu etaoin."

A linotype machine (as its name implies) sets complete lines of type. When the typesetter hits a wrong key, he clears his machine by filling out the remainder of the line with just anything. Then he's supposed to throw away the erroneous line and set it over again.

The keyboard of a linotype is completely different from that of a typewriter. The keys are arranged in rows, and run six deep, but the letters in the first row are e t a o i and n. In the second row they're s h r d l and u.

So the easiest keys to strike when an operator wants "just anything" to fill out a pied line are the keys he contacts as he runs his fingers straight down the sloping keyboard—usually along the first two rows.

This produces a series of shrdluetaoin pie, which should be and usually is tossed into the discard, or "hell box."

But once in a while a printer forgets to discard the erroneous line, and it gets into the paper. Then I get lots of letters.

WAIL TO THE REDSKINS!

The Redskins charged upon the field
In burgundy and gold,
But Eagle talons scalped the Tribe
(THAT story's getting old).

So, coaches Turk and Sam and George:
Develop on your farm
Some tackles, guards, and runners too,
To supplement "The Arm"
T. H. Flood,
315 Livington ter. se.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

Ellen Weiss of 4710 Hunt ave., Chevy Chase, Md., reports that there's an interesting sign atop a pile of Truman biographies at LaGuardia Airport in New York. The sign reads:

"Formerly 19 cents. Now $3."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Beautiful German shepherd female, 7 years old. Formerly in Army K-9 Corps, but gentle and obedient. No phone in these apartments yet; the address is 5602 Queens Chapel rd., Apartment 4, Hyattsville, Md."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Lieut. Col. J. H. Batjer of Fairfax, Va., recommends this excellent prayer:

"Lord grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change; the courage to change those things I can; and the wisdom to determine the difference between the two."

INCIDENTAL INTELLIGENCE

D. C. Cameron calls attention to the fact that where F st. crosses North Capitol, there's a sign which says "N. E. F st." But there's no F st. at that point.

EAGER BEAVER

I'm sure you've heard about the guy who was arrested for doing his Christmas shopping early. They found him in the store a half-hour before it opened.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Mrs. Anthony Eden was in Toots Shor's Thursday night, where she met Henry Sherek, the British producer. He told her he was returning to England in a few days. "You've been here all these weeks and never phoned me," said Mrs. Eden . . . "I didn't have your number." Sherek explained . . . "I think I gave it to you once," said Mrs. Eden, "but I'll give it to you again" . . . "This time, just to make sure," Sherek suggested, "you write it in my address book yourself" . . . Mrs. Eden took his pencil and address book, opened the book to the "E's and started to write—but then she stopped, for there, in its proper place under the "E's" was the address and number which had been there all the time, "Eden, Mrs. Anthony."

American steamship lines will boycott the Arab countries . . . Ladislaus Farago, senior editor of the United Nations World, was at the Foreign Ministry in Oslo on the day the United States election returns came in. Several of the visiting diplomats there started to discuss the surprising result, and one of them asked: "What will George Gallup do now?" . . . If he wants to play it safely and start making predictions which will not fail him," said another, "he should predict elections in the Soviet Union."

Billy Rose, who is portrayed in a brilliant performance by Sam Levene in Moss Hart's new hit, "Light Up the Sky," will review the show for Life magazine. At the opening, Rose, in behalf of himself and his wife, said: "This play is a more or less pleasant invasion of our privacy."

On the morning after election Day, George Jessel arrived at his office carrying a collection of photos showing him with Gov. Earl Warren. He prepared to hang them, to refute the reminders that he had spent nine hours with Truman during the President's visit to Los Angeles. . . . Before lunchtime, however, Jessel learned of Truman's victory. And when the studio executives arrived at the Twentieth Century-Fox executive's dining room they found on the wall a large photo of Harry S. Truman on which was the inscription: "To George, without whom I couldn't have won. P. S.: Where was Zanuck, Schenck, et al?"

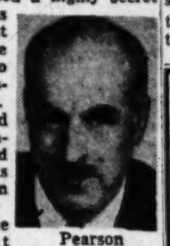
Berlin Red Grab Plan Reported

By Drew Pearson

The Berlin grapevine reports that last week Kurt Fischer, head of the German police in the Russian zone, called a highly secret meeting of his top Communist aides to give orders as to what the Russians expected.



Pearson

Fisher said that the Kremlin had assigned two main tasks to the German Communists:

1. Keep the Communist Party in power in eastern Germany and prevent democratic uprisings or riots.

2. Prepare for the day when the Allies pull out of Germany and permit Communist-trained German police to seize complete control of the entire country.

Fischer also informed his colleagues that the Russians had instructed him to build the German police force up to 400,000 men.

Congressional Names

Pun-makers will have some old and some new names to conjure with next January when the roll is called in the new House of Representatives.

The Republicans lost a Foote in Connecticut, but kept a Hand in New Jersey . . . Democrats Rains (Alabama) and Brooks (Louisiana) and Dixiecrat Rivers (South Carolina) will be joined by a Flood—Democratic newcomer from Pennsylvania . . . a Lea (California Democrat) retired, but there's still a Hill (Colorado Republican) and a Lane (Massachusetts Democrat) . . . a Bishop and a Church (Illinois Republicans) and a Priest (Tennessee Democrat) also were reelected . . . and though the House lost a Harness (Indiana Republican), it kept a Stockman (Oregon Republican) and gained a Steed (Oklahoma Democrat) . . . there will be two Browns (Ohio and Georgia), two Whites (Idaho and California), one Green (Pennsylvania) and a Golden (Kentucky) in the new Congress . . . as might be expected; however, the Smiths will dominate the new Congress. There are four Congressmen by that name—one each from Kansas, Ohio, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Forrestal Feuding

If James V. Forrestal is still Secretary of National Defense next January, Democratic Senators plan to give him an even more intense going-over than the Republicans regarding bickering between the Navy and Air Force.

They point out that Congress specifically passed the unification bill to prevent this bickering and that Forrestal, former Secretary of the Navy, was made the boss of both.

Two secret military conferences at Key West and Newport, R. I., have been held to prevent this bickering and to decide the all-important question of whether Navy planes or Air Force planes shall lead the air assault in case of war. Nevertheless, the old feud was reopened recently before a secret session of Ferdinand Eberstadt's committee, set up by Herbert Hoover to study military reorganization.

Eberstadt, who was maneuvering to be Dewey's Secretary of Defense, let Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John Nicholas Brown give a long argument on why Navy planes, not Army planes, should head the next war offense—even though this was twice decided before at Key West and Newport.

"We have been asked by your chairman to discuss whether the Air Force should absorb naval aviation," began Mr. Brown in the secret hearings.

This was an unusual remark since no one ever made such a recommendation. Eberstadt, a close friend of Forrestal's and a great Navy fan, knew better. Nevertheless he listened eagerly as Brown continued to tell why the Navy was more important than the Air Force.

Air Admiral Explains

Brown then introduced Vice Admiral A. W. Radford, Vice Chief of Naval Operations, who has long spearheaded Navy propaganda that the airplane carrier is the best means of dropping the atomic bomb.

"Members of the Air Force of the United States," said Radford, "argue that we can win a Russian war quickly and completely by the application of a single military force—long-range bombing by atomic weapons. An examination of the geography, matched against known technical limitations of present-day aircraft, leads to something more than a reasonable doubt of our abilities to carry out such a program.

"We agree with Air Force spokesmen that sustained bombing of targets in Russia could be carried out only from bases on the perimeter of Europe and Asia. This requires a battle for bases, which must be seized or occupied and secured before mass bombing can be launched."

Note—When Secretary for Air Symington fired a letter to Eberstadt, protesting against the Navy's testimony, his letter leaked out to the press. Angrily, Secretary Forrestal announced that he would investigate the leak. But, after checking code numbers on the letter and tracking down who had handled it, the leak was narrowed down to only one possible source: The Navy itself.
